Beef Referendum Spokesmen Give Views

BY
EVERETT NEWSWANGER
Managing Editor

LITITZ (Lancaster)— Two spokesmen for the Beef Referendum this week gave supporting views and rebuttals to opposing points that have been raised--especially in the dairy industry. They are John Cope, Grantham, a Cumberland County dairyman, and William McCoy, a Lancaster cattleman.

While much of the opposing discussion has centered around the claims of unfairness in the dairy and veal part of the checkoff, Cope said the tremendous surge in the cull cow markets have added $250-$300 in value to breeding animals. In addition, the dairyman has had a tremendous incentive to cull dairy cows to help with the surplus milk problem.

"Nothing will induce the farmer more to remove borderline or marginal cows or to improve the genetics in his herd than a cull cow price of $800-$900," Cope said. "The issue is not the one dollar checkoff cost, but what is the dollar doing at the slaughter market. And dairymen are not relating the checkoff to this fact."

In the veal calf market, some dairymen and industry people have questioned the fairness of the same one dollar checkoff on a calf as on a 1200-pound steer. But Cope says in veal we are seeing a splendid example of a market-driven commodity, as a result of promotion made possible by the checkoff. "We're getting two and a half times the price for our calves on

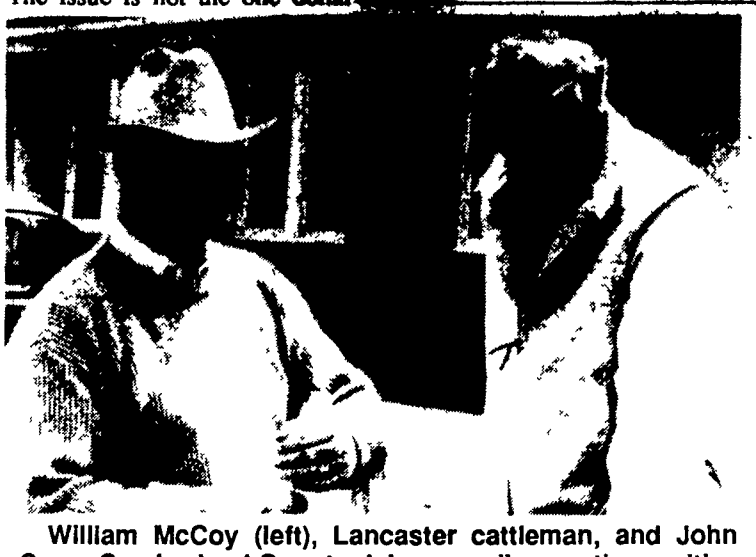
Beef Votes May Be Disqualified

HARRISBURG (Dauphin)— A large number of absentee ballots that have already been cast in the Beef Referendum will be disqualified, according to Kathy Gill, spokesperson for the Pennsylvania Beef Checkoff campaign committee. An "unfortunate technicality" has caused many educated and well-read people to overlook the requirement that the voter's signature must be on the outside of the referendum envelope as well as on the ballot. The votes in these unsigned envelopes will not be counted.

"Unless you have signed the outside of the absentee ballot envelope, you have not voted," Gill said. "The instructions to sign the envelope are on the ballot form, but it's easy to overlook."

Gill reports that in some areas of the country up to 30 percent of the absentee ballots will not count because of this discrepancy. But at least at the Lancaster Extension office all absentee ballots and envelopes have been properly signed. However, if an eligible producer anywhere in the country did not sign the referendum envelope, a vote in person on May 10 at the producer's county extension office is still possible.



William McCoy (left), Lancaster cattleman, and John Cope, Cumberland County dairyman, discuss the positive aspects of the Beef Referendum to be held on May 10.

Poultry Salmonella Discussed

LANCASTER — County home economic teachers got the latest update on eradicating egg contamination when the Poultry Association hosted a banquet on Monday night at the Farm and Home Center. President of the Association, Robert Zimmerman, said the dinner is given annually to the teachers in appreciation for their work in educating students about nutrition and food safety.

HERSHEY (Dauphin)— The grand social of the year for the Pennsylvania Poultry Industry attracted more than 1,800 participants into the ballroom here at the Convention Center. The event: The 1988 Annual Fundraising Banquet of the Pennsylvania Poultry Federation at $100 per plate. And the ballroom attraction--Tony Bennett.

In a few remarks of welcome after dinner, Federation Board Chairman, Bill Schlotterbeck, left no doubt that the event was held to make money to operate the federa-

Johnes: Raises More Questions For Southern Lancaster Dairymen

BY PAT PURCELL

HENSEL (LANCASTER CO.) — Johnes has taken 20 dairy animals from Paul Trimble's Jersey farm in southern Lancaster County since August 1985. Neither Trimble nor his veterinarian know how or when Johnes infiltrated this 100-head milking herd of mostly registered Jerseys.

"I have sent to the slaughter house 20 animals and how it ever got into my herd, I have no idea. I just don't know?" said Trimble.

Johnes disease is caused by a bacterium related to the human tuberculosis organism. It is not new. The Johnes organism was first isolated in 1895. Extensive surveys that document the incidence of Johne's on a national basis were begun in July of 1983. Experts in Johne's research estimate that between 15 and 35 percent of dairy herds across the country probably have one or more animals infected with Johnes.

The disease is mostly transmitted vertically, from dam to daughter. The newborn calf nurses from the mother and may ingest some contaminated manure. That microorganism which enters the calf's digestive system, attaches itself to the lining of the bowel. This prohibits any absorption of nutrients.

"I have seen herds closed for 10-15 years and Johnes still sur-

Breeding Champions At Bittersweet Farms

BY LISA RISSER

DOE RUN (Chester) — In the softly rolling hills of southern Chester County, a new breed of cattle has arrived. Long and straight of back and lean of hip, the chesnut Salers (Sah-lers') cattle call Bittersweet Farms home.

The 140-acre farm is owned by Diane deN Maara, who has spent 12 years building it into a top-notch breeding farm for Thoroughbreds and, for the past four years, Salers. Bittersweet's competent Salers herd manager is Marshall Hamilton.

Maara decided to enter the cattle business primarily to put to use back acreage on the farm that was

Acres Corn Update: Corn futures closed closed fractionally higher today with buying linked to strength in the cash basis levels and a slight increase in export volume near-term. Pressuring prices were active loan redemptions as reported in the latest USDA weekly loan report. May closed up 1/2 cent at $2.01 after trading to a high of $2.02 earlier in the session. Generic certificate values are weaker with many bids at face value.

Acres Soybean Update: Soybean futures closed mostly higher from 1/2 to 3 cents in choppy trading. A late wave of professional buying closed out most new crop options near the daily highs. The spot option closed 1-3/4 cents lower as impending deliveries on first notice day lend pressure. Opening prices were 4 to 6 cents lower on consolidation after yesterday's rally. November closed 1-1/2 cents higher at $7.03-1/2 after posting a low of $6.97 earlier in the day.

Acres Wheat Update: Wheat futures closed lower from 1 to 1-1/2 cents after trading several cents higher earlier in the session Pressure in the spot month was exerted by mixed ideas on delivery notices along with the lack of fresh export news Rain in the key growing areas added further pressure along with position evening in front of first notice day Friday

Acres Cattle Update: Cattle futures settled sharply higher this afternoon with June posting a 117 point gain at $71 57. Buying throughout the session was attributed to strengthening cash fundamentals and rumors that $75 00 had been paid for Fed Steers in Western Kansas. Aggressive packer demand continues despite last Friday's Cattle on Feed numbers. Feeder cattle mirrored activity in the live cattle pit with gains of 52 to 90 points

CME FEEDER CATTLE SETTLEMENT PRICE: 4/23/88- $80 37 up 17.

ACRES NEXT DAY OUTLOOK cash -steady futures-steady to mixed

Acres Hog Update: Live hog futures closed higher from 10 points in the deferreds to 63 in the July option Front month support came from strengthening cash fundamentals and spillover strength from the cattle pits. Ideas that cash prices tomorrow will be steady to higher added further fuel to prices Gains were limited, however, by the futures premium to cash and by larger than anticipated interior movement Tuesday

ACRES NEXT DAY OUTLOOK. cash - steady to higher futures - steady to higher.

AREAS TO LOOK AT TO IMPROVE PROFITABILITY

1. Use 2- feed system for milk cows. Fresh cows get high density feed for peak lactation, and tail enders are fed least cost ration.
2. Grow better quality forages- this will reduce amount of feed needed to balance forage program.
3. Don't keep extra heifers- it costs approximately $300 per year to feed each heifer. Milking cows x 60% gives you total number of heifers birth to fresh. Example 50 milk cows x 60% = 30 heifers total.
4. Work on a better growing program for the generally neglected yearling heifer. Bigger "spring of rib" heifers will eat more forage and give a bigger milk check during their first lactation. Heifers need to average 15,000-16,000 lbs. of milk for their first lactation.
5. Know your actual costs- a good farm records system that separates crops from dairy will show you actual crop costs/profits and milk sales costs/profits.
6. Reduce overhead- rented ground and poorly utilized equipment can be costly. It generally pays to grow your forages, but look at using custom services for silo filling.

OPINION

The Figures Make The Case

The public's increased awareness of the high source of iron and the flavorful nutrition in red meat has been accomplished, at least in part, done with the beef checkoff monies. That's good for the beef and veal producers. But many dairyman forget that they produce beef and veal as a second cash crop too. In fact, the Beef Referendum should interest dairy producers because about 20 percent of the beef market is dairy livestock.

So even though dairy farmers worry first about the price of milk, they should be in tune with what is happening in the market for beef and veal as well. In a nutshell, higher beef prices make higher cull cow prices. John Cope, Cumberland County dairyman, notes that the price for beef has increased from 39 cents per pounds to 52 cents per pound. That means the average value of a dairy animal has increased about $250-$300. For a farm with a 60-cow herd, that translates into a $15,000-$18,000 increase in average net worth. Cope figures he receives ten dollars return for every dollar he invests in the beef checkoff program.

The picture is the same for the veal sector. In western central Pennsylvania the veal prices have increased 4-5 times in the last few years. Chuck Schilling, Petersburg, says the dollar checkoff is only a one percent investment in the calves he sells at 100 pounds. "A few years ago I was lucky to clear $15-$20 after paying my trucking costs," Schilling says. "Today it's $100."

Granted, every cent of these increases can not be attributed to the checkoff, but the dollar investment per animal has helped to expand consumer awareness of the good qualities of beef. In the last two quarters alone, consumption per person has increased. This, in spite of the low cattle numbers and the higher retail prices.

No one would want to do anything to stifle the momentum that has helped position beef as a healthy and integral part of the American diet. This means that producers must continue to improve genetics in their animals and develop products that meet today's consumers' demands. Then they must let the consumer know through advertising and public relations that these products are available. The numbers make a positive case for a yes vote on the beef referendum to be held May 10 in your local county agent's office.

FARM FORUM OUR READERS WRITE

Editor:

"Whether we are Dairymen, Cattlemen, or Veal Producers, the challenge remains the same. Promote your product lest you lose your share of the market to someone who believes in what they are selling more than you believe in yourself."

Nearly 12 years have gone by since I wrote to the Editor of this paper with the above highlights. At that time we were also voting on a self-help beef check-off program.

What has happened to our industry in those twelve years?

At that time beef consumption per person was 89 lb. and poultry consumption was 37 lb. Today, beef consumption per person has decreased to 77 lbs. and poultry has increased to nearly 53 lbs. per person.

Twelve years ago there were 1.85 million farms with cattle. Today that number has decreased to 1.39 million farms.

In the late '70's, Americans spent 2.71 percent of their income on beef. Now those same consumers spend merely 1.79 percent on our product. Statistics show that for each 1/10 percent change, a $3.00 per hundredweight is reflected in the price received for finished cattle.

NOW IS THE TIME

By Jay Irwin
Lancaster County Agriculture Agent

To Practice Pesticide Safety

Pesticides are very important to our highly efficient agriculture. When used as directed, they repay our growers with higher, better quality yields at minimal risk to our safety and health.

*It's important to choose the correct pesticides and application equipment for your particular problem.

*Be sure to read and follow the label directions. Make sure all coworkers do the same.

*Without fail, use the recommended personal protective equipment to prevent harmful contact with chemicals.

*Mix accurately and carefully. Clean up spills. Return unused materials to safe storage.

*Triple rinse and drain empty containers into the spray tank.

*Clean the equipment when you have finished. Don't smoke or eat until you have washed and changed clothing.

*Store pesticides in their original labeled containers in a locked cabinet.

Let's have a safe growing and harvesting season this year.

To Prepare For Soybean Planting

Soybeans should be planted in warm moist soil. A thermometer will help you decide when is the best planting date. Special bayonet type thermometers work very well.

The ideal temperature is about 62°F. The reading should be taken at about 8:00 a.m. when the soil temperature is stabilized. The thermometer should be inserted at least two inches in the soil.

Many people planting soybeans will either end up with too many plants per acre or too few. This will happen because they will use the pounds per acre philosophy which won't work for soybeans. Because soybean seed differs greatly in size, this also means they differ greatly in number of seeds per pound. For example, one variety may average 2,100 seeds per pound while another variety averages 3,100 seeds per pound . . . that's a difference of 1,000 seeds per pound. So, if you plant a bushel of seed with 85% germination, that's a difference of about 48,000 plants per acre.

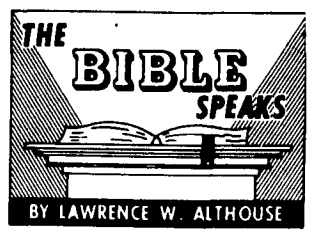
The only way to plant beans is by seeds per foot of row. If a grain drill is used, three beans per foot of row is plenty. If a 30 inch corn row is used 8 to 9 beans per foot is about right.

To Check Farm Ponds

Many ponds are showing both algae and weed infestation build-up and as the weather warms up, these pond plants will begin to grow. Permits are needed in order to use the proper material, and to protect livestock downstream from the pond. Before any ponds are treated in Pennsylvania with any chemical or fertilizer, the owner should obtain a permit from the Pennsylvania Fish Commission. Application for the permit is available from the Pennsylvania Waterway Patrol Office or from our Penn State Cooperative Extension Office.

To Inspect Lightning Rod Systems

The "rumble season" is upon us . . . I'm referring to lightning and thunder. Just a reminder that we are in the thunderstorm season and buildings that have rods should be protected, that is if the rods are connected and free of obstructions. We urge owners of rodded buildings, especially barns, to inspect them closely and remove all items that will stop the flow of the electrical bolt. In many cases straw, hay or bird nests might be between the rod and the building and cause a fire. Also, be sure the rods go into moist soil and are well grounded. A close inspection of the rod system will assure the protection that is needed.



NOBODY, BUT JESUS
May 1, 1988

Background Scripture: Hebrews 4:14 through 7:28.

Devotional Reading: 2 Corinthians 5:16-21.

"Nobody knows de trouble I'se seen," croons the old Negro spiritual. There are lots of times when many of us could well make that our personal theme song. Often it does seem that our problems, our disappointments, our sorrows, and our temptations are unique and unequaled. Nobody, anywhere, at any time has experienced what we have.

That's the way it seems; but, if we are truly observant of the world about us and honest about what we see, we know that our suffering, our sorrows and our worries are not all that unique. If my illness is painful, I can always find someone whose illness is considerably more painful. If I have been let down by someone else, I can find in the lives of others betrayals that are even more painful. If I have been disappointed with some of life's twists and turns, there are always others around me who have even greater cause to be disappointed. Even if I suffer the loss of a loved one, I find that that is a universal experience from which no one is spared.

MORAL TOXIC WASTE

Very often it seems that if we are in any way unique, it must be in that secret moral level that is largely hidden from the eyes of others. These are the temptations that bedevil us, that keep coming back again and again, no matter how hard we struggle to shut them out of our consciousness. These are the secret sins of hidden thoughts, whose depravity and horror only we can know. These are the "forbidden" thoughts and images that pop into our consciousness. 'Nobody knows . . ." and we are profoundly grateful that they cannot know.

So, what can we do with this spiritual garbage, this moral toxic waste? If we let it accumulate in our consciousness, it becomes an unbearable burden. If we shove it under the rug of our unconscious, it continues to fester and rot our spirits, even though we may not be consciously aware of it. If we look for someone who can "haul it away" for us, we may find that there is no one with whom we can entrust it. Sometimes our guilt, our despair is so great that we find it difficult to share with a counselor or confess to a pastor/priest. No one could possibly understand us and what we're carrying around inside.

HE UNDERSTANDS

"Nobody but Jesus," says the spiritual. That's why the writer of the Epistle to the Hebrews likes to refer to Jesus as our "great high priest." Jesus alone "knows" all that we have known. He understands because he himself has stood under the same proscription of being human. "For we have not a high priest," says Hebrews, "who is unable to sympathize with our weaknesses, but one who in every respect has been tempted as we are." (Hebrews 4:15).

Hebrews finishes this assurance with a sobering thought: ". . . yet without sinning." Jesus knows both the limitations and the potentials of our humanity, for he experienced both. He understands what we are and what we can be. Thus his perfection does not disqualify him to be our high priest, the one who above all others knows what we know and even more. So, "Let us then with confidence draw near to the throne of grace, that we may receive mercy and find grace to help in time of need" (4:16).

Whenever we are feeling that 'Nobody knows . . .", let us remember that life-saving qualification: nobody but Jesus!

We Put More Men In The Field Than The United States Army.

Currently, Uncle Sam keeps around 300,000 army soldiers on active duty.

Farm Credit, on the other hand, helps keep over 2 million farmers on active duty. With more loans for more farming needs than any other lending institution.

For many of you, we've been there from the beginning. With money for land, as well as your house and barn.

We help stock the farm, too. With loans for everything from cows to catfish. Seeds to saplings. Fertilizer to fencing.

And when it's time for a new tractor or pick-up, just call us to get the wheels turning.

Farming has been our only field of interest for seventy years. That's because we're farmers too. Farm Credit is owned and controlled by the same farmers who use its services.

What's more, come rain or shine, we'll stick by you in any kind of weather. And when you think about it, that's reason enough to join our ranks.

Spray weevils early with Furadan® 4F insecticide and save.

When you spray your alfalfa for weevil prior to first cutting you'll save yields and free up your time later, when you're really busy.

Alfalfa weevils begin feeding prior to first cutting. This can hurt tonnage, quality and stands. Spraying early not only prevents all this, but it means that you won't have to worry about it after first cutting—when you may not have time to spray at all.

Furadan® 4F insecticide from FMC.

The best choice for early alfalfa weevil control Because you have more to do than worry about weevil.

Herbicide Tolerant Tomatoes

WASHINGTON — The U.S. Department of Agriculture has approved field tests for tomato plants genetically engineered to tolerate sulfonylurea herbicides.

E. I. Du Pont de Nemours & Co., Inc., Wilmington, Del., developers of the tomato, will begin testing this spring at a site near Bradenton, Fla.

Larry S. Slagle, acting associate administrator of USDA's Animal and Plant Health Inspection Service, said these trials will clarify the usefulness of the new variety. "If trials show the plants tolerate this new low-risk class of herbicides, commercial tomato producers will have available a valuable new method of controlling weeds without damaging their crops," he said.

The field testing will involve growing the experimental tomatoes next to a variety already on the market and spraying both groups with a sulfonylurea herbicide. If the performance of the new tomatoes proves superior to that of existing varieties, they will be further tested and may eventually be marketed. Such tests are conducted for all new plant varieties, whether they are genetically engineered or developed through conventional breeding, said Slagle.

According to Slagle, APHIS has completed a thorough review of the scientific data and methods and has determined that these tests would not have a significant impact on the environment. Copies of the environmental assessment documents may be obtained from: USDA, APHIS, Biotechnology and Environmental Coordination Staff, Room 406, 6505 Belcrest Rd., Hyattsville, Md.

A notice of this action was published in the April 7 Federal Register.

Beef Referendum

today's market," Cope said. When you consider the bottom line, where the young calf has been fed colostrum that would have been disgarded, and brings $150 at market, you have a high profit item. And the dollar checkoff is peanuts. If we had this kind of profit margin on the remainder of our operation, we would do very well," Cope said.

BEEF CYCLE

McCoy feels the idea that the referendum was timed to favor the beef cycle is without merit. "Earlier there was concern that when the referendum was taken we might be in a different situation," McCoy said. "We certainly are in the part of the beef cycle where beef numbers are at unprecedented low levels. But it's also unprecedented that beef consumption is up at the same time that prices are higher. Per capita consumption of beef increased in both the last two quarters," McCoy said. "And that's certainly not a result of lower cattle numbers. I've never seen this phenomena where we have cheap feed on the farm and high cattle prices. Usually cattlemen sit on the cattle until the corn crib is empty," Cope said. "But we're not seeing the over-fat, over-done steers coming to market. We're keeping current, and I think it'd because of promotional progress at the retail level. It's exciting," McCoy said.

PRODUCER APATHY

McCoy said more negatives bombard the industry now than when the previous referendum vote was taken ten years ago. "The American Medical Association bombarded the industry with negative cholesterol and fat reports," McCoy said. "But with the checkoff dollars we have been able to, through research and promotion, change our product and present it to the consumer in a more palatable form. We now feature beef for today's generation of consumers. We didn't have the money to do this before the checkoff.

"My concern is that for whatever reason a lot of people will not vote. I would guess that would have a negative effect on the outcome," McCoy said. "I think if the referendum is defeated we'll never see another chance in my lifetime, and many of the advances we have made in the last months will be lost."

VOTE TIME

"Any time is push time somewhere in the nation's ag community," Cope said. "While the May 10 date hits our area in planting time, a March date would have had farmers in the southern tier states going full blast. June will be harvest time in many areas, and mid-winter could have brought a snow storm. So we simply need to take time to vote at the time we have the opportunity," Cope said.

WHO, WHEN WHERE

If the wife is a partner in the farming operation, she can do the voting on Tuesday, May 10 at the county agent's office. In addition, a 4-H or FFA steer owner can also cast a vote. By now absentee ballots should have been cast. But if the outside referendum envelope was not signed, the beef producer who voted needs to re-vote in person. (See side story page 1.)

Both industry leaders agreed that if producers feel there are some inequities in the program they should support the referendum and then work within the industry to make any changes. "This is our industry program," McCoy said. "We control what is done. It's not under any government control."

Bittersweet Farms

lying idle. "I always like horses and cattle together," she explained. So she decided to become a seedstock producer.

After spending time researching the various beef breeds, Maara discovered Salers while in her native Canada. Salers have been bred to forage on native grasses in miles of rocky terrain. The mountain cattle are used for labor as well as valued for their milk and beef.

The first fullblood Salers bull, Vaillant, was imported to Canada in 1972, and its semen was distributed throughout North America.

Research into the breed sold Maara on the breed, and she purchased three mature cows and nine heifers over a six-month period for seed stock. Of these, one cow was Princess Blue 74P, a cow which since has produced eight class winners and grand and reserve grand champions.

Currently Bittersweet Farms has the largest Salers herd in Pennsylvania with 75 fullblood (100%), purebred (93.75%), and crossbred animals.

Calving ease a top trait

There were many characteristics that sold Maara and Hamilton on Salers. Primary among these is the breed's calving ease. "We haven't had to pull a calf from a Salers, and this year we've had a 100 percent calf rate," Hamilton reported proudly. "A Salers calf has a low birth weight, and it is just like a string bean: long and skinny."

Much of the calving ease comes from the Salers dam's large pelvic area and her birth canal's downward slope.

Once born, the calf is up and suckling, usually within a half hour. From that point on rate of gain is high, producing heavier weaning weights than many other breeds.

Another plus for the Salers is their early maturation and high fertility. Females conceive and breed back quickly, and bulls can cover more females than other breeds, according to Hamilton.

Salers are good foragers, often covering a 40-mile area. "They're good on the range, which is important," Hamilton said. "They'll eat anything. In the winter they can feed on hay without any loss in weight."

Salers afficionados also claim that because females can convert any type of grass into high levels of butterfat, calves grow faster and better than other beef breeds.

The cattle do well in feedlots as well, being put on the rail at 12 to 14 months with weights ranging from 1,150 to 1,400 pounds.

Packers like a Salers carcass because of its leanness, which consumers currently are demanding from their beef. "A Salers has won the carcass class at the Denver National Western Show the past seven out of eight years," Hamilton noted. "The meat is 50 percent leaner than that of an Angus-Hereford cross. Salers meat has only ¼-inch backfat."

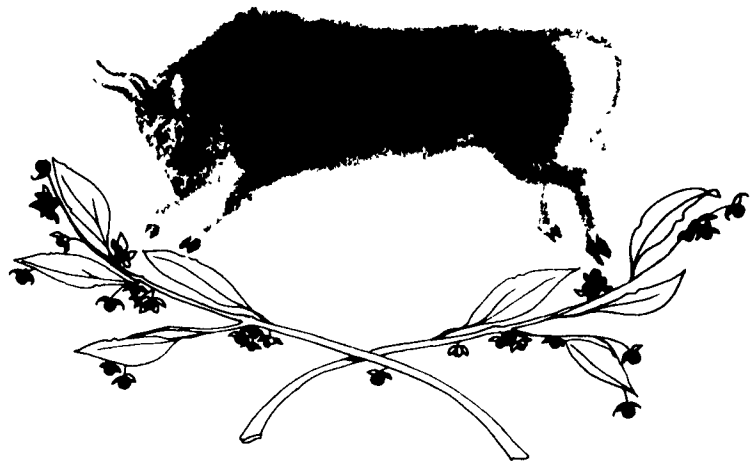
The U.S. Olympic Committee is sold on Salers meat as well, giving it their endorsement. They particularly were impressed by the beef's leanness.

Top traits transfer

Other positive Salers characteristics include heavy bones and hooves, good coat, resistance to diseases including pink eye, high tolerance to temperature extremes, and an easy disposition. To top this all, these traits are passed on in crosses. And Salers cross females are non-terminal, which allows farmers to improve their herd rather than dilute it.

When asked if there were any undesirable qualities in a Salers, Hamilton responded, "I haven't found any yet. They're efficient foragers, good calf raisers, weigh off heavier calves on just grass, breed and calve easily, and have lean meat. We wanted an easy-keeping cow, and we have it. A Salers is a balanced breed."

Princess Blue is one of Bittersweet's original Salers cows. A champion herself, she has produced eight class winners and grand and reserve grand champions.



Bittersweet Farms Inc.

When Maara began building her herd, she started with females that would represent different types of beef cattle traits such as depth and length. "We started our own gene pool, if you will," she observed. "I thought if we had three family lines representative of different traits, our customers would have a choice."

For instance, if a farmer needed to add depth to his animals, he could purchase Salers with that trait.

Maara developed her herd mostly through embryo transfers (ETs) with Holstein cows as recipients. Although Holsteins don't do well on the range in winter, Maara and Hamilton opted to use them because of their availability.

"We're moving away from Holsteins, though," Hamilton remarked. "Holsteins aren't easy keepers. Their feed bills in winter are too high." After weaning this year, Hamilton plans to sell off all Holstein cows and use Salers or crossbred beef breeds.

Bittersweet Farms have had more than 100 ETs in the past three years, born mostly from January to March and in September.

Although Hamilton and his assistant, Mick Scrafford, are present when the cows calve, they don't have to help the Salers dams. Holsteins on the other hand, may need help pulling the calf out. Once the calf is born, it is tagged, weighed, measured, and tatooed. Every morning the cattle are herded into a corral where the calves are separated out. At this point Hamilton and Mick can check the health and progress of the young calves, but mostly they use the time to halter break the animals. Also during this time, in the first half of the year, the cows and heifers are clipped and checked for heat.

Salers seed stock

Bittersweet Farms is a seedstock operation for the Salers, and their animals go about half and half to purebred and commercial herds. "We're not able to hold onto bulls more than 14 to 15 months," stated Hamilton. "They're in demand now because of the Salers' low birth weight. And because the market is strong in bulls now, we can afford to keep the females until the market comes around."

Salers add pounds

In commercial crosses Salers will add pounds at weaning time and produce an animal that converts feed well. This means less money invested in the animal before slaughter.

In a cross, the Salers also will contribute hybrid vigor, well-shaped pelvic area on the females, lower birth weight in calves, fertility, and good carcass performance.

Bittersweet Farms has produced many winning Salers, having had a grand and reserve grand champion female and bull for every year they have been showing. They've sold bulls from Florida to Oregon and from Maine to California and had many repeat buyers.

"I talked to guys who've said their best females have come from our herd," recalled Hamilton. "It makes me happy to hear that. It lets you know you're doing something right."

With acres of healthy Salers of all ages and championship animals year after year, it is obvious that Bittersweet Farms is a winner in the seed stock business.

Diane deN Maara, owner of Bittersweet Farms, has been raising champion Salers since 1984. Her herd currently numbers 60 Salers fullblood, purebred, and crosses.

Miss Bittersweet 10W, a January 1987 purebred, was named champion Salers female at the Iowa Beef Exposition. The heifer brought $2,800 from Feemster Farms in Indiana.

National Dairy Board Recognized For Advertising Effectiveness

ARLINGTON, VA — A National Dairy Board advertisement directed toward physicians has won a prestigious award in the medical print advertising field.

The Board was the recipient of a Special Award for Significant Achievement presented by Modern Medicine at its 15th Annual Aesculapius Awards in New York. Modern Medicine, a clinical journal reaching over 120,000 primary care physicians nationwide has presented the awards, named for the Greek god of medicine, for 15 years.

This year marks the first time that a nonmedical or nonpharmaceutical ad has earned recognition, according to Bernard Rogers, publisher of Modern Medicine. "The National Dairy Board's effective advertisement for dairy calcium received an extremely high physician interest score. The Board's innovative marketing plan to reach physicians in a clinical journal environment, which is traditionally dominated by pharmaceutical marketers, demonstrated unique foresight and expertise. It was a plan that proved tremendously successful as our reader interest studies showed."

In acknowledging the award, National Dairy Board CEO Joseph Westwater praised the role physicians have played in helping to communicate the importance of dairy calcium to their patients. Westwater also gave credit to American dairy farmers for having the foresight to invest in effective promotion, nutrition and product research which has resulted not only in program accolades, but in significant dairy consumption increase.

The National Dairy Promotion and Research Board, composed of 36 dairy farmers, was established by The Dairy and Tobacco Adjustment Act of 1983 to develop and administer a coordinated program of promotion, research and nutrition education to strengthen the dairy industry position in the marketplace. This effort is financed by America's dairy farmers.

Maryland Jersey Sale Has $2,500 Top

GINGER SECRIST MYERS

UNION BRIDGE, MD — With hardly a vacant straw bale to be found for seating, the Maryland State Jersey Sale unveiled its new face to a large crowd gathered for the sale held Saturday, April 23rd. Hosted this year at a new location by the James Stonesifer Family, Maryland Sunset View Farm, the sale offered production packed pedigrees in response to the increasing demand for Jersey milk in the tri-state area.

Top selling animal at the Maryland State Jersey Sale was GR Clover Dale Helen who sold for $2500.00. This fancy springer sired by Highland Magic Duncan was consigned by Henry Brenneman, Salisbury, MD, and was purchased by Eli Swartzentruber, Oakland, MD. Shown here with the heifer are (l-r) James Stonesifer, sale host and contending bidder, Wileford Runkles, representing both Brenneman and Swartzentruber, and Jack Kahler, leadsman.

Evidence of that strong demand was a sale average of $944.00 on 50 lots which included calves from six months of age through three-year-olds. This is a $330.00 increase over last year's sale average.

Top selling animal of the sale was GR Clover Dale Helen consigned by Henry Brenneman, Salisbury, MD, and purchased for $2500.00 by Eli Swartzentruber, Oakland, MD. Contending bidder was James Stonesifer, Maryland Sunset View Farm, Union Bridge, MD.

Jersey Genetic Opportunity Sells For $7,000

GINGER SECRIST MYERS
Adams Co. Correspondent

CLEARBROOK, VA -- Fred Bennett, Sedgewick, Maine, paid $7000.00 for a Jersey genetic opportunity which has not yet even been conceived. EPA Grants Pesticide Exemptions

DOVER, DE — The Environmental Protection Agency recently granted the Delaware Department of Agriculture two pesticide exemptions for this crop year that will benefit potato, bean and pea farmers.

The exemptions, provided under Section 18 of the federal Insecticide, Fungicide and Rodenticide Act, will allow Delaware potato farmers to use the insecticide Cryolite (sodium fluoaluminate) against the Colorado Potato Beetle and green pea, lima bean and snap bean growers to use the herbicide Pursuit (imazethapyr) for weed control.

According to H. Grier Stayton, pesticide compliance supervisor for the Department of Agriculture, the exemptions will apply only to the 1988 growing season.

"We were granted the exemption on Pursuit last year but only for use on lima beans and snap beans. This year it has been extended to peas," Stayton said.

Farmers must adhere to special labeling provisions such as preharvest intervals and application rates in order to meet exemption requirements, Stayton explained.

The EPA will grant exemptions for normally unregistered uses of a product if there is evidence to prove severe economic losses will be incurred if the product is not used.

The Department of Agriculture submitted exemption applications to the EPA for Cryolite and Pursuit earlier this year. Using technical data compiled by the University of Delaware Cooperative Extension Service, the department was able to prove that emergency conditions did exist and that Delaware farmers could expect severe crop losses if the two products could not be used.

For more information on the exemptions contact Grier Stayton at 736-4811 or 1-800-282-8685.

Poultry Industry Supports

tion. Schlotterbeck said that while fun, food and fellowship were an integral part of the Thursday evening event, this could have been had at lesser cost. What Schlotterbeck called "a wise investment" was contributed to the federation to receive services of a professional staff and coordinate efforts on common problems of the various segments of the industry-- layers, broilers, turkeys, and game birds.

In addition, the investors in the federation gained support and encouragement from allied industry and the academic community. Industry concerns are heard in state and local government, and a team and program is in place so that it can respond to extraordinary emergencies if and when they happen.

"There's no end to the problems and challenges our industry must face," Schlotterbeck said. "In the past year, people had to be tough, and you will continue to be. But we always look forward to tomorrow."

Jay Greider and Melvin Mitchell served as banquet co-chairmen. John Hoffman, Federation Executive Director, opened the meeting with the invocation. Earl Birk, Pennfield Corporation, was recognized as the 1988 Leading Ticket Salesperson, with Thomas Bross III, Round Hill Foods, as a close second.

Tony Bennett sang hit tunes of the 50's and 60's and received a standing ovation at the conclusion of his program to end the evening's activities.

Vegetable 'Check-off' For Marketing To Be Discussed

HARRISBURG (Dauphin) — A public hearing on a proposal to establish a marketing program for Pennsylvania vegetable producers will be held here Friday, May 6, Agriculture Secretary Boyd E. Wolff announced recently.

The hearing, required under the Pennsylvania Agricultural Commodities Marketing Act of 1968, will start at 10 a.m. in Room 309 of the Agriculture Building, 2301 N. Cameron St.

Secretary Wolff said the proposal to be discussed at the hearing would authorize a "check-off," or contribution, by vegetable growers to fund marketing, research and promotional activities benefitting producers.

"The program would be controlled by the growers," Wolff said, "which would further fulfill the Casey Administration's pledge to place control of commodity marketing programs in the hands of producers."

The check-off would apply to growers who plant one or more acres of vegetables for sale, and to greenhouse producers with 1,000 square feet or more of greenhouse area planted to vegetables.

In addition to a flat fee of $25 for each vegetable producer, the check-off would entail a contribution of $1.50 for each acre over 10 acres in vegetable production. For greenhouse vegetable growers, the rate proposed is $1.50 for each 1,000 square feet over 10,000 planted to vegetables.

The proposal represents an attempt by growers to replace a Vegetable Research Program established in 1982 and terminated by a review referendum vote last year. Under the Agricultural Commodities Marketing Act, review referendums are required every fifth year that programs operate.

The former program restricted the use of funds to research activities only, and during last year's referendum the Pennsylvania Vegetable Growers Association urged producers to terminate the program in order to establish one of broader scope.

The May 6 hearing will investigate the possibility of presenting a new program that would include marketing and promotional initiatives to benefit vegetable growers.

Poultry Salmonella

food science at Penn State University, zeroed in on the recent furor over salmonella. Although the bacteria was isolated in 1885, recent northeastern outbreaks publicized by the Journal of the American Medical Association named the egg as a carrier of the salmonella virus.

Following ingestion of food containing the micro-organisms, victims develop gastrointestial illnesses within six to 48 hours. Symptoms include vomiting, diarrhea, stomach cramps, headaches and nausea.

Research shows that the amount of bacterial that causes the virus varies from person to person. A healthy adult is less susceptible than the elderly and young children.

Although the news media has sensationalized the danger of eggs carrying salmonelle, Mast offered a perspective on the problem. He pointed out that 350,000 people die annually from cancer linked diseases; 23,500 from drunk driving; and 48 to 480 from salmonellosis.

Transmission

How does salmonella get into live poultry? Three sources are suspected:

•1. Feed transmission - Since heat easily destroys salmonella, the animal offal used for feed products are heated to destroy all possible existing bacterial such as salmonella. According to Mast, the only way feed can carry the bacterial is if salmonella was reintroduced after the feed was processed. This sometimes happens if trucks transporting feeds have been contaminated and not properly cleaned.

•2. Environmental contamination - This happens most frequently in food preparation if eggs or meat is not heated enough to kill the bacteria.

•3. Egg transmission - It is suspected but not actually confirmed that the virus may be transmitted when the egg is being formed if the hen is a carrier.

Killing the virus

Viruses with non-harmful bacteria will fight and destroy salmonella. Currently research is being done in labs by introducing bacteria organisms found in mature poultry into those containing salmonella. Too weak to compete, the salmonella strain dies.

Mast stressed that food when properly handled poses no threat of salmonella to people. That means consumers should never eat raw meat or uncooked eggs.

In the home and in the food industry, salmonella can always be eliminated if poultry and eggs are not consumed raw. On the flip side, statistics show that 77 percent of the salmonella outbreaks recorded are traceable to a food source. This most often happens at public eating places through improper handling of food. Twenty per cent of the cases happen in home food preparations.

When the source is identified, cooks often defend their improper food preparation habits by protesting, "But that's the way my mother always did it" or "but I often did that before."

The press publicizes that salmonella is carried through Grade A eggs. Does this mean that Grade AA or B eggs are safe?

"No," Mast emphasized and then explained that the term Grade A eggs is a form used for identification. Before the recent outbreak, consumers thought the disease was transmitted only through cracked or imperfect-shell quality eggs. Now, cases have been traced where shell perfect eggs were suspected as containing the virus. Mast stressed, "Even if the egg does carry the germ, it can definitely be destroyed when heated."

Mast told the teachers, "Educators play a major role in stamping out the virus since children are impressionable. If proper cooking methods are taught, children will follow through."

Food safety

•1. Never use the same platter, cutting board for prepared meat if it was used for raw meat.

•2. Do not eat raw eggs. Always heat the egg white enough to coagulate.

•3. Wood cutting boards are frequent carries of the virus. Mast emphasized the importance of not reusing a cutting board without sanitizing it with bleach.

•4.Do not eat raw meat.

Mast emphasized that America's food supply is the safest of any country in the world. Eggs are no exception since chances of contacting salmonella through eggs are extremely slim.

Mast also assured the audience that current studies show that AIDS carriers cannot transmit the disease through food preparation.

In conclusion Mast said, "It is theoretically possible to have a salmonella free product, but not economically feasible with current technology unless consumers are willing to pay higher prices for the products."

East's Largest Junior Beef Show Set For End Of May

MEADVILLE (Crawford) — The Northwest Keystone Junior Beef Classic, the largest Spring Junior Beef Show east of the Mississippi River, will be held over Memorial Day Weekend at the Crawford County Fairgrounds here. This is the fourth year for the all-breed heifer and steer show, which last year saw young cattlemen and women from five states exhibit nearly 300 head at the two-day event. The show is designed as a kick-off for the summer show season and gives youths, under 21 years of age an opportunity to enter competition drawn from a larger area than usually seen at the county fairs in which they compete during the summer.

This year's show is being awaited anxiously by many. Entrants must only be younger than 21 years of age and need not be a member of either 4-H or FFA. However, it is becoming a tradition for groups, from as far away as Lancaster and Maryland, to come to the Classic as a club. Since the three-day Memorial Day weekend allows Monday for rest and recuperation and since the main show schedule takes place on Sunday, young cattle enthusiasts find the event a favorite preview to the summer show season.

Once again, in 1988, the Keystone Junior Beef Classic is being held in the extension facilities of the Crawford County Fairgrounds, just north of Meadville. Saturday, the 28th will open with judging contests and showmanship, which last year proved one of the Classic's most popular events. On Saturday evening, Classic exhibitors will have an opportunity to watch a rodeo, which will be underway at the fairgrounds. Other cattle-related events will take place through Saturday afternoon.

But the real excitement occurs Sunday, when the steers and breeding classes are judged. This year, the Classic is following a nationwide trend, and steers will be judged by breed. Cash prizes and trophies will be awarded as a Grand and Reserve Champion steer will be chosen from breeds represented. Crossbred steers will also compete for premiums to be paid in all steer classes, as well as for Grand and Reserve trophies. A Supreme Champion will then be named; the overall show champion and a cash jackpot will be paid to this winner.

In the breeding show, premiums will be paid for all classes and trophies will be awarded for Grand Champion, Reserve Champion and Bred and Owned for each of the breeds as well as for an unrestricted "commercial" class. Showmanship will be recognized for exhibitors in three age levels of competition.

Additional information about the 1988 Classic is being prepared for mailing to past participants and breed associations. For other answers to questions about this show, county agricultural agents will have brochures and entry forms, or you may write to the Keystone Junior Beef Classic Committee, c/o Bob Calvert, Mercer County Extension Office, Mercer, PA 16137.

Deadline Nears On Farm Program Review Period

CHAMBERSBURG (Franklin)— "The 60-day public review period for the U.S. Department of Agriculture's (USDA) proposed changes in the National Conservation Program is half over," said John Akers, District Conservationist at the Chambersburg office of the Soil Conservation Service.

"Anyone interested in the future of soil and water conservation and the environment should study the changes and make their comments and suggestions before June 4," Akers said.

Changes proposed by USDA may be reviewed in the local SCS or Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service (ASCS) offices located at 550 Cleveland Avenue, Chambersburg.

"Under requirements of the Soil and Water Resources Conservation Act (RCA), public participation and cooperation is an integral part of any conservation program formulation," Akers said. "This procedure helps USDA planners prepare conservation programs that are responsive to both private and public interests."

Akers said that the proposed changes place special emphasis on programs to reduce erosion on rural land and measures to protect surface and ground water from contamination.

Comments about the proposals should be in writing and must be postmarked no later than June 4. Mail responses to: NCP, USDA Soil Conservation Service, Box 985, Federal Building, Harrisburg, PA 17108. For further information, contact your local SCS or ASCS offices.

Yes, twelve years have shown a change. Now a new opportunity brightens the horizon. Since the Beef Check-off Program began 22 months ago, beef consumption has turned the corner and is on the increase after its long decline. One recent independent study shows that 14 million "light" beef users are now eating beef more often after seeing check-off funded advertising. Beef consumption has actually increased 4%.

The American Heart Association has endorsed the need for beef in a well balanced diet. Thousands of health care providers, nutritionists and educators have been given accurate information about the value of beef.

The success of the beef industry lies in the future and not in the past. I believe there will be more changes in our industry in the next twenty years than in any previous time. We will have the opportunity to vote for continuing the success of the program on May 10 at the County Extension Offices. The vote will be our decision for the future of our industry, our farms, our business. The most important job you have on May 10, is to take time to vote "Yes". It's time we all step forward and take control of our industry and our future. A "Yes" vote is the opportunity; the time is NOW.

Harry H. Stambaugh

To the Editor:

We dairy farmers are asked to vote on that $1 check-off for each calf or cow we sell. Are we the farmers responsible for the sale of beef by giving the whole $1 per calf or cow that we may get only 25 cents per pound when hamburger joints get that beef and sells hamburgers for $2 each or about $15 per pound. Steak houses sell about three ounces of steak for $7.95 or about $35 to $40 per pound?

Is it fair to take a poor farmer's $1 out of 25 cents per pound that they stole the meat or beef from him at, while McDonalds and the steak houses get hundreds of times more than the farmer does? This is robbery!!!

Oh yes, there are those in the beef associations ready to champion that kind of charade just for their own glory. It was said over 500 years ago "that no matter how absurd or bad something is, there will be somebody out there to champion it."!! That's what this amounts to. That $1 check-off is robbery and it makes me pretty darn mad!! I'm voting against it.

It's time to stop the robbery. The "rich non-farmers" who own the beef farms for "tax shelter" purposes are the ones in the organizations who want the poor farmers to pay the check-off. If they couldn't use the farms for tax shelters all surplus would dry up quick.

I was to some of these feeder sales and I saw these "rich-tax-write-offers" running up the price of feeders so that the genuine farmers could not afford to buy the feeders. The more the loss for those "tax-write-offers" the better they like it and the deserving farmers go crying. And the beef market is glutted with the beef from the "rich tax-write-off-farms," something that has no right to occur.

The "tax write-offers" complain about farmers getting subsidies while he beats Uncle Sam out of money with his "tax write-offs." There would be no need of subsidies if they would stop all the "tax write-offs" for the rich that have no business in farming.

Editor:

As I read Mr. Frame's discussion in your paper last week about the Beef Check-Off, I was reminded of a statement made by a state legislator.

"Before I give you the benefit of my remarks, would someone tell me what we are talking about?"

Evidently Mr. Frame (Jr. or Sr.) still does not know.

Editor:

The PA Beef Checkoff Program has shown amazing successes in just 18 months. I am confident producers will go to their County Extension Offices May 10 and Vote YES to continue the program.

However, a few opponents have given up trying to convince people the Checkoff won't work — even they recognize that it is doing a job for us. Instead, they are resorting to false statements and scare tactics. Let's set the record straight.

No matter what a few wealthy opponents may say, we are all in the beef business. You can raise all the cattle you want, but if you don't produce beef for the consumer, you don't have a market, or an income. It's that simple. The Checkoff Program is helping us keep track of consumer trends to stay ahead of the game.

According to John Huston, president of the National Livestock and Meat Board, it's working. Per capita consumer spending for beef was up five percent during the last three months of 1987 from the prior year, and up again during the first quarter of 1988 over both last year and the last quarter of 1987.

Farm prices are showing a real increase even after adjusting for inflation — at a time when the total supplies of beef, veal, pork, chicken and other meat products is near a record. That shows me a program that's working for us.

Beef prices are up in Pennsylvania in those 18 months. Look at today's prices, and then remember October of 1986 — choice steers went for $61.10, utility cows were bringing us $37.50, choice vealers were $83.50 and bull calves returned to farm were $89.00. Prices farmers receive have definitely turned up — and that's the whole idea.

Producers aren't in this all alone, either, no matter what you hear. Last year, we spent $72 million in advertising, promotion and research for beef and veal through the Checkoff. Retailers spent almost eight times as much — more than $550 million — to advertise beef and veal, according to the Food Marketing Institute. Our advertising shows them we are committed to our future, and gives retailers incentive to advertise even more.

The Checkoff was developed, funded and run by producers. Two Pennsylvania farmers, Paul Espy of Huntingdon County and John Cope, a Cumberland County dairyman, sit on the Beef Board which oversees the program. Paul Espy is one of ten producers on the operating committee — government-run? No way.

Some opponents are trying to scare producers by saying that, like the CAT Fund, the Checkoff might be raised. That's a load of manure, and they know it. The one dollar Checkoff is set by law. The Beef Board and the Secretary of Agriculture couldn't change that, and don't want to.

What all this amounts to is that a small group of people who don't even have facts on their side are trying desperately at the last minute to scare farmers away from the Checkoff. We can only guess at why. Bob Frame, as president of Vintage Sales Stable, will make money in the cattle business every time you sell an animal whether or not there's a Checkoff Program. You can be sure of that.

The scare tactics won't work, though, because beef, dairy and veal producers have joined together to fight for a profitable future. Don't let someone else decide your future. Vote YES for the Beef Checkoff — it's an investment that's already paying off.

Johnes:

faces in their herd," said Dr. David Baver DVM, R. W. McMuller., D.V.M. Ltd. of Strasburg. "And research at Ames (National Animal Disease Center,Iowa) isolated the organism in soil after 20 years."

More questions have surfaced about Johnes than answers in Trimble's herd. He began treating several cows for Salmonella in 1985. Those animals were showing the symptons of high fever and diarrhea. In the fall of 1985, Dr. Baver diagnosed a cow with diarhhea, weight loss, which did not respond to the Salmonella treatment, as having Johnes. The culture test confirmed his diagnosis.

That diagnosis makes the other cases of Salmonella suspect. However, time proved Baver diagnosis to be correct. Although there were earlier episodes of animals suffering from severe diarrhea, this was the first confirmed cases of Johnes.

"In a 1984 a cow had severe diarrhea, but she was on a diet with a high intake of barley," explained Baver. "We felt the diarrhea was from the barley and we did not lose her. She recovered. And we did not lose any of the other ones which were diagnosed as having Salmonellla. Animals do not recover from Johnes so this tells me our diagnosis was correct. Those animals all recovered."

Weight loss is one of the clinical signs of Johnes.

"The first one which had Johnes, we treated her as one of the Salmonella (infected) cows. She had a tremendous weight loss," explained Trimble. "In three to four weeks I watched this cow drop nearly 400 pounds. She was the first cow which showed this tremendous weight loss and the most severe clinical signs we have seen yet. We have had one cow since then with some weight loss. We had one cow with constant loose bowels, she tested positive."

Trimble lost one cow in 1985; five in 1986; two in 1987 and 10 tested positive by the New Bolton test. Trimble sent the ten off to the slaughter house. The cows over the years which have tested positive or suspect ranged between the ages of three to ten-years old.

"That was ten cows that got on the (hauling) on the truck the last time. One of them milked 32 lbs. that morning and had not hit her peak yet. Right there I knocked 400 lbs. out of the milk tank. The oldest cow was 5-6 years old," said Trimble.

The present production level at the Trimble Jersey farm is 10,700 lbs. of milk with 490 lbs. of butterfat. Trimble is pleased. Production in that last 12 months has improved. It has not increased, but it has not fluctuated as it had been. It is becomeing more constant.

"We have refinanced the farm a couple times. The bank has been very good to us," said Trimble.

Paul says he is determined to beat Johnes. His wife, Charlotte, says he is stubborn.

"I want to keep the farm. My son has shown a real interest in farming and I want to beat this thing and I think a guy can whip it," said Paul

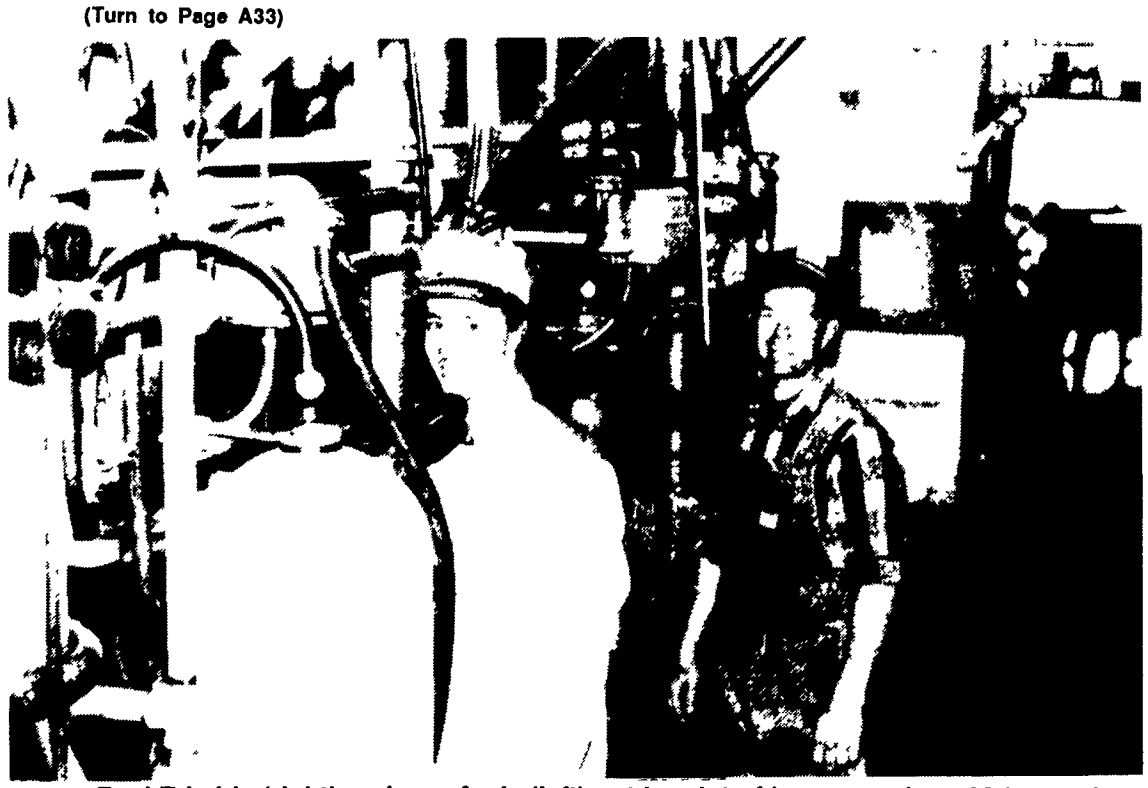
"But what I worry about now is what if I wanted to or had to sell out and disperse the herd, I would not get anything for them," added Paul.

For atleast five years, Trimble has maintained a closed herd, but prior to that enlarged the herd. In 1968 he started with 40 head and added 20 head to the herd in 1971. In 1974 he added 40 head.

Trimble is on the state testing

(Turn to Page A33)

The presence of Johnes on the Trimble farm near Hensel has threatened this family's livelihood. Charlotte has taken on a partime job away from home in addition to her responsibilities on the farm.



Paul Trimble (right) and son Andy (left) put in a lot of hours moving 100-head of Jersey through their milking parlor. Although the effects of Johnes has cut milk production, Paul is determined to survive the battle and keep the farm for his son.

Johnes: Raises More Questions

program and is also part of the research project being conducted by Penn State University and the New Bolton Center of the University of Pennsylvania.

Farmers which have Johnes diagnosed in their herd can receive indemnity money, but only if the test has been conducted by the state labs at Summerdale. The state only recognizes the results of its own test. Tests conducted by the university researchers at the New Bolton Center, although they show positive, are considered suspect until confirmed by tissue tests conducted at the Summerdale Labs.

However, two animals left Trimble's farm before the state test results came back. He will not get indemnity for them. In addition, he will not receive indemnity money for the ones tested positive by New Bolton, unless Summerdale determines them Johnes positive.

The researchers test farms involved with the project twice each year and visit the farm twice a year to examine management practices and make recommendations. Trimble does not wait until an animal shows the Johnes clinical signs of severe diarrhea and tremendous weight loss before culling. If the New Bolton test results in a positive, Trimble sends the animal off to the slaughter house.

"I don't want the animal around to infect others. There's no cure for Johnes, so there is no reason to hold on to the animal," said Trimble.

Trimble had two cows tested in 1986 before he could get the entire herd tested. Those animals tested positive on the first test, but when the entire herd was tested a short time later, they showed negative. Trimble said this speaks more for the incidiousness of the disease than for the accuracy of the test.

Manure samples are cultured for a three to four month period for the Johnes organism, however, the infected animal does not constantly shed the organism. A test taken one day may contain the organism. The test taken three days later, althought the animal is infected, may not contain the organism. The test is accurate, but the disease is not cooperating.

"Harrisburg recommends we clean-up the herd and clean up the area with a disinfectant called Environ. But you can't disinfect and clean every inch," declared Trimble. "Management for us has been the key. As soon as a calf is born, I take her away from the mother before she has a chance to nurse. I don't keep any bulls. I fell there is a fair chance that a guy can whip it."

"They (New Bolton and PSU researchers) recommend removing the calf from the dam immediately and keeping the calving area clean. The problem is that Jersey's don't have calving problems. In 20 years I may have had two calving problems, so I never had to take the time to be there when a cow was calving, but now I try to get there before the calf is up and about. Before I always depended on the calf to get up and get its colostrum. I guess we should start freezing colostrum because now we need to keep colostrum." said Trimble.

Dr. Baver some people recommend pasteurizing colostrom because there is always some chance of fecal contamination. There is a synthetic colostrum which is mixed with whole milk. Baver said some of his clients have tried it and found it to be very difficult to mix and expensive.

There is a vaccination program, but according to Baver, it is only used to take the economic bite out of the disease for dairymen. Also, the vaccination is dangerous for those adminstering it.

"You must be approved to use the vaccine. And there are some veterinarians opposed to its use because it is a form of tuberculosis. Also, it is extremely dangerous for the administering veterinarians. Very dangerous. If you should inject yourself or prick your finger you should cut your finger off immediately. It is deadly," said Dr. Baver.

"We had a client with 25% of his herd infected and we vaccinated his herd.

According to data the vaccine is effective in reducing the incidence or delaying the onset of clinical signs. The vaccine, however, does not totally eliminate infection. Some vaccinated animals may be normal clinically, but have infected intestines, shed the organisms and have positive fecal cultures. Animals must be less than 35 days old when vaccinated.

Baver knows of atleast 60 dairy herds in the southern Lancsater County which have Johnes.

"It is particularly bad down here in the southern end because farmers are always jockeying cattle between farms and different sales," said Baver.

"We look for it (Johnes) now. It started 10 years ago when a farmer with a black & white herd moved into the area. Ever since then we have been looking for it. Then it was a quarantinable disease. You practically had to fight the farmer to have an animal tested," said Baver.

More questions about the spread of the disease and what precautions farmers should be taking and what restrictions regulatory agencies should be enforcing are surfacing than answers. Next veterinarians and authorities in the animal health industry will address the the concerns of many dairymen about this silent killer.

Ballpark Milk Promotions Planned

TOWSON, MD — It's that time of year, when Americans can once again enjoy their favorite sport . . . baseball. As the boys of summer take to the baseball diamond to do their thing, millions of fans will be watching them on television, listening on the radio, or heading to the stadium to see to them live. And as they do the Middle Atlantic Milk Marketing Association will be advertising "Milk. It's Fitness You Can Drink," on television and radio broadcasts of the games, and at the stadium.

Phillies

A print ad promoting the Family of Milk, whole, lowfat and skim, will run all season in the Phillies Program Book. In the ad, MAMMA Spokesman, Mike Schmidt, tells fans to, "Drink Your Milks," referring to the Family of Milk. MAMMA has also planned a special promotion day with the Phillies on May 1 at Veterans Stadium. That day the Phillies will be taking on the Atlanta Braves. Fans 14 years and younger that come to the game will receive a baseball glove compliments of MAMMA and the Phillies. Prior to the game all the fans will be entertained by a cow milking contest between television and radio celebrities.

Orioles

Cal Ripken, Jr. will be promoting whole, lowfat and skim milk to Orioles fans for MAMMA throughout the season. A full-color print ad for the three types of milk will run all season in the Orioles Program Book. MAMMA has also planned a ballpark promotion day with the Orioles on June 5, when the Orioles take on the New York Yankees. Fans 14 and under that come to the game will receive a life-size growth poster of Cal Ripken, Jr. and his younger brother Bill to hang in their room. The growth poster has proven to be a very popular promotion item in the past for MAMMA and has excellent long term advertising residual. An additional run of the posters is being produced for placement in school cafeterias at the start of the new school year.

BEST IN DESIGN, PRICE AND EXPERIENCE

30 YEARS AGO
THIS WEEK

-Ground was broken Wednesday at the Milton Hershey Estates in preparation for the 16th National Plowing Contest and Conservation Exposition to be held there Aug. 21 and 22.

On hand for the ribbon cutting and hoisting shovels were William L. Henning, secretary of agriculture; James Bobb, vice president of Hershey Estates; Ivan McKeever, state soil conservationist and Lee H. Bull deputy secretary of agriculture and general chairman of the exposition. Representatives from state water, game, wild life and forestry departments were also present. Others from the department of highways, utility companies and heavy equipment dealers witnessed the proceedings.

-Farm activity was interrupted in the beginning of this week by rain, but by the end of the week fields had dried out enough in most sections of the state to allow farmers to resume their spring work.

Planting of oats and plowing for corn made good headway in nearly all parts of the state with the exception of the North Central area where wet field conditions caused some delay.

-A brief glimpse of the past plus an expert analysis of the present will be prominent features of the 73rd Annual Convention of the Holstein-Friesian Assn., of America at Boston in June.

Before discussing the affairs of the world's largest dairy cattle registry organization, the Convention group of more than 2,000 will tour historic Plymouth Harbor in a chartered excursion vessel.

-The 19 cow herd of Robert H. Kauffman, R1 Manheim, produced the highest herd average in Lancaster County during the first three months of this year.

His herd averaged 1,787 pounds of milk and 75 pounds of butterfat. The record is reported in the current newsletter of the Red Rose Dairy Herd Improvement Assn.

RCMA Announces Latest Premium To Dairy Farmers

BATAVIA, NY — The Regional Cooperative Marketing Agency Inc., an organization of 22,000 dairy farmers in 11 Northeastern states, announced today that members of the organization will receive a 15-cents per hundredweight premium for milk produced during February 1988. The premiums bring the total paid by RCMA to farmers to more than $11 million in just six months.

The 15-cent premium is one cent larger than the January premium. RCMA is an organization designed to give farmers a say in establishing a fair price for their milk. Cuts in the federal price for milk have meant a steady decline in income for farmers during the 1980s. Since 1981, dairy farmers in federal Order II have seen $1.89 per hundredweight cut from the price they receive.

"RCMA is committed to establishing fair milk prices, which are vital to the survival of the Northeast's family farms. We're working hard to sign-up all of the dairy farmers in the region. Farmer unity will be the deciding factor in whether we continue to lose family farms at the rate of 50 per week, or we halt this alarming trend," said William Zuber, RCMA president.

Efforts to increase membership are centered on regions in New York and Pennsylvania where sign-ups have lagged behind overall totals. RCMA has more than 90 percent of the dairy farms in the Northeast in its membership. RCMA is using a series of localized meetings to increase membership in target areas. A total of 58 dairy farmers joined the organization during March.

March Milk Production Dips

HARRISBURG (Dauphin) — Milk production in Pennsylvania during March totaled 865 million pounds, down slightly from March 1987, according to the Pennsylvania Agricultural Statistics Service.

The number of milk cows in the Commonwealth during the month averaged 715,000 head, 5,000 less than February and 4,000 less than March a year ago. Milk production per cow averaged 1,210 pounds, 60 pounds more than February and up five pounds from March 1987.

Grain and other concentrates fed to milk cows in the state on April 1 averaged 16.5 pounds per cow per day, up one-half pound from a year earlier. The value of grain and other concentrates fed to cows averaged $8.15 per hundredweight, 55 cents more than a year ago.

In the 21 states surveyed, March milk production totaled 10.6 billion pounds, 3 percent more than March 1987, while the number of milk cows in those states averaged 8.63 million head, down 1 percent from a year ago. Production per cow, at 1,234 pounds, was 44 pounds above the same month last year.

Grain and other concentrates fed to milk cows throughout the country on April 1 averaged 17.3 pounds per cow per day, 0.2 pounds more than a year ago. The value of grain and other concentrates fed to milk cows this April 1 averaged $7.09 per hundredweight, up 30 cents from 1987.

New York Dairy Promotion Plan Given Approval

NEW YORK — A plan whereby dairy farmers contribute money for milk promotion activities of the American Dairy Association and Dairy Council, Inc., headquartered in Syracuse, New York, was recently approved for another year by Thomas A. Wilson, Market Administrator, New York-New Jersey Milk Marketing Area. These milk promotion activities include advertising, nutrition education, publicity for dairy products, marketing and product research, and informational services.

This year the deduction under the "positive letter" will again be applied as a credit against the 15 cents per hundredweight dairy promotion deduction required by the Dairy and Tobacco Adjustment Act of 1983. Up to 10 cents designated by producers for an approved local promotion program such as that of the American Dairy Association and Dairy Council, Inc. is eligible as an offset to this mandatory 15-cent deduction.

Mr. Wilson said that the action allows handlers regulated by the marketing orders to send "positive letters" to their dairy-farmer suppliers. A dairy farmer who receives a letter will be considered to approve, for one year, deductions of 10 cents per hundredweight from his monthly milk checks, unless he notifies his handler in writing that no deduction should be made. Producers in New Jersey and New York are not subject to this program because statutes require deductions in those states.

Moneys deducted from payments for milk delivered on or after May 1, 1988 will be paid directly by the handler to the American Dairy Association and Dairy Council, Inc., Syracuse, New York.

The Market Administrator explained that participation in the local program is voluntary for both handlers and producers, and a participating producer may have deductions stopped at any time by notifying the handler. A producer who receives no letter need not contact his handler since no deduction will be made for the local program.

In approving the plan for the coming year, Mr. Wilson pointed out that there has been no substantial opposition by producers to the use of the positive letter procedure.

Use of the positive letter approach was requested by Dairylea Cooperative Inc., and Eastern Milk Producers Cooperative Association, Inc.

At the Northeast Dairy of Distinction annual meeting last week, Bill Underwood was re-elected President, Baker was elected Vice-President, and Helen Fountain was elected Executive Secretary and Treasurer. Fountain replaces Sue Reynolds as Executive Secretary. Reynolds resigned to take a job with the New York State Agricultural Department as acting Deputy Commissioner.

The deadline to apply for the Dairy of Distinction Award passed on April 15. The processing and road side inspection of farms is in progress across the northeast states where the program is in place. In Pennsylvania, 241 applications were received this year. A maximum of ten farms in each of ten state districts may be awarded. Winners will be announced in local districts during June Dairy Month activities. Plans call for all previous winners in Pennsylvania and the new winners this year to be invited to a special fraternal get-together at Ag Progress Days in August.

Haying And Grazing Reserve

YORK — The Agricultural Reconciliation Act of 1987 authorizes haying and grazing of Acreage Conservation Reserve (ACR) and Conservation Use (CU) for payment acreage under the 1988 Feed Grain and Wheat Program except during April 1 through August 31, 1988. York County farmers may hay as well as graze ACR and CU acreage beginning September 1, 1988. Small grains growing on ACR and CU for payment acreage must be destroyed before June 15, 1988 if the designated acreage will be hayed or grazed. Haying or grazing will not be permitted on ACR and CU for payment acreage where after County ASC Committee approval, small grains are left standing after June 15, 1988. York County farmers that have enrolled in the 1988 Feed Grain and Wheat Program and have questions should call the York County ASCS Office at 755-2801.

Producrs run the program, and 20 percent of the directors on National Beef and Promotion Board are active dairy farmers. Two of the 10 members of the Operating Committee are dairy producers.

Dairy producers are a big part of the livestock industry — 20 percent of it in fact. So anything that expands the market for beef and veal helps every dairyman's bottom line. Dr. Lew Mix, Agway, says dairymen get a $4.50 return for every $1.00 invested in the program.

More than 96 percent of the monies collected are used for market expansion and research. Less than 4 percent goes to administration.

Half of each dollar collected stays right here in Pennsylvania. Local producers control how that money is spent for advertising, promotion and research.

Consumer attitudes are changing; people are coming back to beef! Fully 63 percent of consumers in a recent survey said they expect to eat more beef this year. And there was a 24 percent increase in the number who feel that beef "is a good food for the way I live today."

Research shows the "Real Food for Real People" campaign is working. The more people hear our message, the more beef they buy. Consumer expenditures for beef were up in the fourth quarter 1987 and first quarter 1988.

The Beef Board is promoting hamburger — the number one product made from cull cows — in a joint promotion with the Dairy Board by "building gourmet cheeseburgers." And all money collected from veal calves is used solely for veal research, promotion and advertising.

Northeast DHI Earns Quality Certification

Northeast Dairy Herd Improvement Association (DHI) received notice from National Dairy Herd Improvement Association that their operations earned the Quality Certification rating for 1988. This rating covers the laboratory, field services, and computer processing for the six states served by the cooperative.

The Quality Certification rating requires that DHI organizations meet stringent standards in three major areas: Field Services, Milk Laboratory, and Records Processing.

The Field Services must meet established standards in areas such as meter calibration checks, rule enforcement, records supervisor training and evaluation, turnaround time, tests per year, and verification testing.

The Milk Analysis Laboratory is evaluated in areas such as sample delivery system, tempering and mixing of milk samples, and calibrations and calibration checks of electronic testing instruments.

The Records Processing Center is gauged in the areas of meeting deadlines set by the USDA-AIPL and the National DHIA Policy Board, the national test herd, data transmission, turnaround time, and statistical data on field and lab services.

This annual evaluation helps assure quality dairy production records throughout the dairy industry.

Northeast DHI is a member-owned cooperative providing record-keeping and herd management systems to 6,200 dairy farmers in Connecticut, Maine, Massachusetts, New Hampshire, New Jersey, and New York.

Volunteers Aid ASCS

LEESPORT (Berks) — Volunteers provided more than the $1 million worth of assistance to the U.S. Department of Agriculture's Soil Conservation Service in 1978, according to SCS Chief Wilson Scaling. "We want to recognize the 2,200 persons who have donated 132,000 hours helping SCS offices help farmers," said Schaling.

Among the projects volunteers have helped with are tree planting, inventorying wetlands, conservation education, telephoning land-users about the Conservation Reserve Program and providing clerical and other assistance.

Volunteers are a big help to conservation programs in Pennsylvania, said William Hunt, SCS Volunteer program director. For example, in Somerset County, Carl Miller was retired, but knew most people in the county. He was a big help with making contacts and he did surveying and helped design practices. He even took a course at the vo-tech school on drafting so he could be a better volunteer.

Another Somerset County retiree, Bates Murphy has a PhD in chemical engineering. He is preparing a do-it-yourself spring development instructional packet to aid farmers in this dairy and livestock county.

Scaling reports that there are few jobs that volunteers have not tackled, since some had backgrounds in biology, botany, surveying, mapping and soils. However, special skills are not a requirement to volunteer. "Our work is so varied," stated Hunt, "that there is an opportunity for everyone, skilled or unskilled, to help out."

Anyone interested in joining the Earth Team can call 1-800-THE-SOIL for the location of the local SCS office. Earth Team volunteers receive coverage for injury claims while on the job, are compensated for travel expenses and have their contributions of time made a part of their permanent work record.

RCMA Names Schiavi

BATAVIA, NY — The Regional Cooperative Marketing Agency Inc., which has 22,000 members in 11 northeastern states, has named Lewis Schiavi as manager of accounting and administration.

Schiavi joins RCMA after having served as accounting manager for Ingram Software in Buffalo. Prior to that, he was employed as controller/credit manager of a Canandaigua Wine Company subsidiary.

Schiavi will be responsible for handling RCMA's accounts receivable and payables. RCMA is a farmer-run organization which collects over-order premiums from milk dealers and distributes that money to its farmer members. In just six months RCMA has put approximately $11 million into the hands of dairy farmers through the over-order program.

"We're extremely pleased to add Lew Schiavi to our staff. His expertise will help insure that our members receive accurate and on-time premium payments," said Edward Anna, RCMA executive director. "We have to collect money from 150 milk dealers across the region and must be sure that our 22,000 members receive what they are owed. Lew will be responsible for making sure this process runs smoothly."

Successful Sewing Shop Established By Teen Entrepreneur

BY BARBARA MILLER
Lycoming Co. Correspondent

TROY (Bradford) — Has success been eluding you lately? Perhaps, like Carolyn Walsh all you need is a chat with your hairdresser, a boyfriend who thinks your idea is "absolutely crazy," and supportive, understanding parents.

That's what worked for Carolyn Walsh seven years ago, when at age 17, she opened her first sewing shop in a rented building in Troy. Today Carolyn's business has expanded so much that a year ago she and husband, Richard, bought what is now The Sewing Shop in Sylvania.

Carolyn had just graduated from high school and was signed up to attend a medical secretary school when, luckily for her, she needed a haircut.

"I was talking to the beautician, Cindy Vineski, and I told her I just didn't want to go on to school. Then she asked me what I would like to do. She knew I always liked to sew and so I jokingly replied that I would like to start my own fabric store."

Driving home, Carolyn says, she got to thinking about her conversation with Cindy and decided to talk to her parents about it. Her parents, James and Eleanor Boor, said if that was what she really wanted, they would help her start a sewing shop rather than putting money into college for Carolyn.

Another person who expressed an opinion at this time about her change of plans was her boyfriend. "When I first started my shop, my boyfriend thought I was absolutely crazy . . . I guess that's what kind of encouraged me. I thought if he doesn't think I can do it I'm going to prove him wrong and it made me more determined than ever to make the business go," Carolyn recalls.

Looking back, the 24-year-old entrepreneur now says she never expected the business to grow to its present proportions where she sews prom and weddingn gowns and gives classroom instruction. Currently, she offers classes in sewing, quilting, and in crafts.

Carolyn, who often constructs a dress or a gown from a picture torn from the pages of "Seventeen" or "Modern Bride" magazine, says she has 24 prom gowns to finish by May 20. On March 31, she stopped taking orders, she said, figuring then she would be sewing one gown every day and a half to get them all finished by the 20th.

"Making a dress from pictures is a lot of fun," Carolyn reports. She says young girls are often hard to fit and may obtain a more flattering costume by changing the lines of a top or skirt or mixing and matching them to create an original design. Carolyn works from a "master pattern" and when the dress is completed, photographs it and puts it in a file along with the amount of yardage required and other bits of information for future reference.

"You have to think ahead to create such original designs," Carolyn observed. Although she admits these original creations take a little more time, she regards it as time well-spent.

With no interruption, Carolyn says, she can sew an average wedding gown in 10 hours and a prom gown in seven to eight hours. To do this Carolyn employs three sewing machines which are always set up in her shop. One machine is used for straight stitching; the second is a serger for finishing edges, and the third is a hemming machine.

Prices on Carolyn's hand-sewn hop and prom gowns range from $65 to $95 and the cost of an average wedding gown is about $250.

Last year Carolyn created ten bridal gowns and 30 attendants dresses. Wedding gowns are her favorite item to sew because she enjoys working with the laces.

For her personal sewing, Carolyn admits she has a hang-up for making outside jackets. Thus far, she says, she has sewn six or seven jackets.

Although Carolyn was reared on her parents' 500-acre dairy farm where they currently milk 80 or 90 cows, she says, she neither joined 4-H to learn to sew nor did well in home economics.

Instead, as usual, Carolyn did things her own way. When she was 13 she started attending extension sewing classes with her mother. These classes were held during school hours several times a month. In order for Carolyn to attend, her mother had to take her out of school.

"I got so interested in how they could make a square of material into clothing," Carolyn recalls. Regarding her school absences, Carolyn remarks, "My mother told me she would take me as long as I kept my grades up."

Carolyn's grades remained stable and her mother continued to shuttle her back and forth to sewing classes. The first item Carolyn remembers sewing was a pair of Calvin Klein jeans. The pattern cost $8.00; according to Carolyn, the jeans were selling for $35 and $40.

The creative aspect of sewing has long fascinated Carolyn. "It's always interesting to see what can come out of your hands," she states. Further, she says, she enjoys wearing her original creations. "I can walk down the street and I won't see myself coming. That means a lot."

The most exasperating aspect of sewing, according to Carolyn, is ripping out. "Some days," she admits, "it is better to just walk away from it."

For Carolyn, one of the nicest things about running a sewing shop is helping people sew. "I like being able to help somebody when they're trying to create a garment," she explained.

But the long hours she puts in — sometimes 12-hour days — to make her shop a success is sometimes very difficult. She and her husband, Richard, who is a carpenter, are presently remodeling their new building which has a total footage of 5,000 square feet. The Sewing Shop occupies 3,500 square feet and the remainder is rented. In addition to the store and classrooms, the shop will contain a separate bridal room that in Carolyn's words, "will house everything that concerns a bride."

But such dedication to sewing has its rewards. Carolyn recalls sewing three skirts of green velvet for a Christmas wedding. Only one of the girls was available for a fitting and Carolyn was forced to sew the remaining skirts without the benefit of measuring the girls. Shortly before the wedding the girls arrived, tried on the garments, and enjoyed a wonderful fit. "The women who ordered the skirts was so happy she cried," Carolyn reports.

In the realm of tips for beginners who might be thinking of sewing their own prom or wedding gown, Carolyn stresses one thing — patience. "It's mainly patience — you've got to have patience to work with them." Additionally, she cautions everyone to double check pattern instructions before sewing, noting that it will save a lot of ripping later.

To back track a bit on the thread of this story, one tends to wonder what happened to the boyfriend with the negative attitude Carolyn says helped propel her to her success.

"Yes, you guessed it," Carolyn says with a laugh, "I married him. He decided I wasn't too much of a risk."

Not one to leave anyone hanging by a thread, Carolyn adds Richard recently told her he was proud of her for starting the shop.

Homestead Notes

On being a farm wife - And other hazards

Joyce Bupp

Construction in progress rarely presents an appealing picture. Especially on lush, rolling ground of high fertility.

Soil, denuded of protective grass, looks barren and vulnerable. Shattered skeletons of once-thriving trees and shrubs lie stacked in ragged piles of drying branches and exposed, lifeless roots.

For two seasons, our meadow, just below the farmstead buildings, has endured the ravages of "improvement."

Always an interesting part of the farm, this acre or so section of sometimes swampy, creek-split bottomland was a haven for small wildlife and intriguing wetland plant growth. Our dependable spring bubbled down through the swampy stretch, from its origin beneath the springhouse, having provided unknown numbers of inhabitants before us with cold, delicious water.

When they were younger, the kids built small dams here, sailed countless rafts of wooden origin, and cooled their heels and toes on blistery hot days. Periodically, they'd catch and bring for inspection a favorite, fat frog named Frogricka, who lived in a four-inch pipe which drained the backyard underground springs into the creek near its springhouse source.

Then, during meadow remodeling for recommended livestock waste management facilities, the business end of a backhoe bit into our spring supply while digging a tile drainage line. Nearly overnight, in the midst of the worst drought in two decades, our total farm water source dried to a trickle. When the herd drank, there was almost no water for house use.

The counter attack plan decided upon was the addition of another, smaller, pond to the meadow, one which would back up into the springhouse and restore our water source.

Two days work with a bulldozer reshaped the former site of mini-dams, summertime toe dabbling, and Frogricka's pipe-shaped condo complete with fresh running water. As planned, with the timely aid of fall rains, the Little Pond filled, then backed up into the underground spring source, and water has again become a commodity we don't worry over every moment.

It took yet another summer for the meadow construction area to dry enough for final leveling, smoothing and grass restoration.

This restoration of the plant and aquatic life has been fascinating to watch. Though the farmer gathered cattail seeds from Grandpa's pond, and scattered them over the waters, Mother Nature as usual bested him at her own game.

Before the fluffy seeds heads scattered by his hands could think about settling into the pond edge, slender shoots marked where a cattail was already making healthy growth. Other water-loving plants also quickly established themselves along the edge, and on the soil bottom.

Now, the cats often prowl along the trimmed bank of the Little Pond, apparently searching for dinners of the fat, succulent legs of Frogricka's relatives. Plump, silvery shadows dash from the shallow edge into deeper water, skittish tadpoles fleeing to the protection of deeper waters as man and beast stroll the grassy banks. On the first warm evenings of late March, the meadow sang at dusk with the high-pitched voices of the peeper frogs.

Even a maple tree, which has grown half-heartedly by the side of the springhouse for 25 years, seems to have a new outlook on life. One side of the tree had appeared to be dying during the past few summers. Having water backed up to its feet would no doubt finish it, we figured.

Instead, the maple is more symmetrical, thicker with leaf buds and blooms, and healthier looking than it has been for a long time. It almost seems to be smiling as it stands guard pondside, tempting us on warmer afternoons to lean against its rough trunk and linger there in the sunshine. Or maybe have a picnic lunch by the sparkling water.

And, on occasion, a pair of wild mallards, dainty hen in muted browns and blacks, and drake gaudy with feathers of iridescent green, quietly paddle the Little Pond and rest beside the growing cluster of cattail shoots.

Man can dig and destroy, dike, drain and dam, restructure, reshape and redo his environment. But sooner or later, Mother Nature will still have her way.

In the case of the Little Pond, we couldn't be happier about her having a hand in the end result.

Cumberland Search

CARLISLE (Cumberland) — All single young women who have completed their junior year of High School and will not reach their 24th birthday by December 31, 1988, and from a dairy farm background are eligible to compete for the title of 1988 Cumberland County Dairy Princess, announces Roy Coover, chairperson of the Cumberland County Dairy Princess Committee.

The contest covers Cumberland County.

The winner of the Dairy Princess Pageant, to be held June 17, at 8 p.m., at the Embers Convention Center, 1700 Harrisburg Pike, Carlisle, will be eligible to vie, at the state level, for the title of Pennsylvania Dairy Princess.

Thirty state princesses and hundreds of county princesses have served as spokepersons for the dairy industry in Pennsylvania over the last thirty-one years. They appear in shopping malls, fairs, supermarkets and on radio and television to educate consumers about the dairy farmer's products.

Any single woman who has completed her junior year in high school, is not over 24 years of age, never married and whose parents or guardians are engaged in dairy farming is eligible to compete for the title. A young lady is also eligible if she, herself, is a fulltime employee on an operating dairy farm or is the owner of at least two dairy animals in a bona fide 4-H or F.F.A. project prior to May 1, 1988.

The winner of the Pennsylvania Dairy Princess Pageant receives a $1200 cash award. The first and second runner-up will receive a $500 and $400 cash award respectuvely. The winner and the two alternates will have the honor of reigning as Pennsylvania Dairy Royalty for the period of one year. The state title is honorary and there would be no interruption of school or regular employment plans.

Young women interested in entering the Cumberland County Dairy Princess Pageant should contact:

MICROWAVE MINUTES

By JOYCE BATTCHER

Floating Island, also called Eggs in Snow, is a light dessert for an elegant company meal or an everyday family meal. Serve it for either, but make it in your microwave for easy cooking.

This dessert with the intriguing name is simply a thin custard with soft meringue "islands" or "eggs" floating on top. In your microwave the custard is cooked without scorching and meringues are done in minutes.

The same is true for Lemon Meringue Pudding. The thick lemon pudding cooks quickly with little fuss and minimum stirring. The meringue stays snowy white, rises high and cooks in about three minutes — all without heating up your kitchen.

Meringue in the two recipes is basically the same as you would use to top conventionally-made floating island or a lemon or cream pie. Stove-top "islands" are soft and white — the same as microwaved ones. However, they must be poached in hot milk and then transferred to the cooked custard — adding up to a lot more work than in the microwave method.

A conventionally-baked pie meringue has browned top edges, while a microwaved meringue is pure white. It rises high, is soft and tastes like the cross between whipped cream and baked meringue.

Either of today's meringues can be used to top tarts or any kind of pie. When making pies this summer, try a microwaved meringue to help keep your kitchen cool. (However, your microwave won't produce a dry firm meringue crust, like that called for in Angel Pie, or individual meringues for filling with fruit.)

The custard in Floating Island is a soft one. In fact, you may think it's quite thin for dessert — but it is traditional and it is a refreshing change of pace from thicker baked custard. Serve it alone in the classic manner, or serve it over fresh fruit or white cake.

Custard could be made by cooking milk and sugar first and adding beaten eggs, as in Lemon Meringue Pudding. But, if you're willing to stir often and briskly as the recipe directs and watch carefully so it doesn't cook too much, my stir-it-together-at-once method is quicker and easier. After cooking, cool custard by setting the measure in a pan of cold water. That also helps prevent overcooking and curdling, in case you cooked it too much.

The pudding in Lemon Meringue Pudding is made without much stirring, but it does need some — otherwise a big lump of cornstarch will remain on the bottom. Add the eggs gradually, as directed in the recipe, and the result will be perfectly smooth.

Pudding or custard-making is an ideal time to use a microwave whisk — a whisk made of microwave-safe plastic — which can stay in the microwave during cooking. It's so much more convenient than having to take a wire whisk in and out during cooking. And, there's no messy counter! If you don't have a microwave whisk, next convenient is to use a microwave spoon and stir vigorously. (The ideal spoon for a lumpless custard or pudding is one with a hole in the center — for smoothing — and a pointed tip — for getting into edges.)

Floating Islands

4 eggs
¼ cup granulated sugar
1⅓ cups milk
1 teaspoon vanilla
¼ teaspoon cream of tartar
2 tablespoons granulated sugar

Separate white from one egg; set aside in a clean grease-free deep bowl. Combine the 1 egg yolk, 3 eggs, ¼ cup sugar and milk in microwave-safe 1-quart measure; beat until no specks of yellow remain. Microwave (High), uncovered, 3 minutes; stir well. Continue microwaving (High) 1 to 1½ minutes more, whisking or stirring vigorously each 30 seconds. Cook until custard coats a metal spoon. Be careful not to overcook. Stir in vanilla and set measure in a dish or sink of cold water. Cool 15 minutes.

Beat egg white until frothy; add cream of tartar. Gradually add 2 tablespoons sugar, beating until stiff peaks form. Divide custard into 4 microwave-safe custard cups or dessert dishes. (Set on a microwave-safe tray for ease in carrying.) Mound a spoonful of meringue on each. Microwave (High) 1½ to 2 minutes or until meringues are done when tested in centers — metal knife comes out clean. Chill completely. Serve cold. Makes 4 servings.

Note: Custard will be thin — not thick like pudding.

Each serving: 137 calories, 9g protein, 9g fat, 6g carbohydrate, 176mg sodium, 253mg cholesterol.

Lemon Meringue Pudding

1⅓ cups granulated sugar
¼ cup cornstarch
1⅓ cups water
4 eggs, separated
½ cup lemon juice
2 tablespoons butter
1 tablespoon grated lemon peel
¼ teaspoon cream of tartar
½ cup granulated sugar
½ teaspoon vanilla
Garnish: thin strips of lemon peel*

Stir together 1⅓ cups sugar and cornstarch in microwave-safe 2-quart measure. Gradually stir in water, mixing until smooth. Microwave (High), uncovered, 5 to 6 minutes, stirring after each 2 minutes, until mixture is thick and boiling. In a small bowl, mix egg yolks together until well combined. Add about ¼ cup of hot mixture to yolks, mixing well; stir into hot mixture, mixing until smooth. Microwave (High) 1 minute. Stir in lemon juice, butter and lemon peel. Pour into a deep microwave-safe pie plate; set aside.

Beat egg whites until frothy; add cream of tartar. Add ½ cup sugar, 1 tablespoon at a time, beating until stiff peaks form. Mound meringue on pudding. Microwave (High) 2½ to 3 minutes or until meringue is done when tested in several spots — metal knife comes out clean. Cool 15 minutes or more and serve warm. Or chill and serve cold. To serve, spoon into dessert dishes. Makes 8 servings.

*For the most attractive garnish, use a citrus zester (a hand gadget found in specialty kitchen shops) which makes thin strips of peel (or zest). If you don't have a zester, grate lemon peel onto cool meringue.

Each serving: 295 calories, 3g protein, 6g fat, 60g carbohydrate, 102mg sodium, 130mg cholesterol.

Have You Heard?

WHAT TO DO WHEN AN APPLIANCE QUITS

What do you do when you are faced with an appliance in your home that has conked out? First of all you should stay calm. With any appliance, check to see if the power cord is properly plugged into the electrical outlet. If it is, then check for a blown fuse or tripped circuit breaker. If the fuse and power cord check out okay, then the next step is to find a reputable trained service technician to handle the repair.

The best way to find a qualified service technician is to: (1) Ask your appliance dealer — many appliance stores do their own servicing or are able to recommend someone; (2) Use the yellow pages.

Always find out if the service technician has been trained on the brand of appliance needing repair. This is especially important if your product is still in warranty because repair done by an unauthorized source may invalidate some warranties. It is always a good idea to reread your warranty and check specific details so you are aware of what the manufacturer will cover when the service technician arrives.

Other things to check before you call a repairman are: (1) Be sure all doors and latches are properly closed. Many appliances have safety features that only allow them to operate when the doors are tightly latched. (2) See if the on-off switch has been accidently moved by a child or some bulky item. (3) The owner's manual, sales slip and warranty should all be together and conveniently close to the appliance. (4) If you feel you "just must" try your hand at repairing the appliance yourself, see to it that it is disconnected before you touch it.

ELEGANT SILK, NOW EASY CARE

The world of silk is changing. Long associated with elegance, silk can now be associated with easy care. The latest news is "washable silk" according to the latest fashion reports.

The development of washable silk is already making an impact in the fashion world. Silk is close to being the fabric this spring. Designers are using silk in their sportswear lines. Full pull-on pants, long shorts, skimpy tops, oversize shirts and flirty skirts, even coats and jackets all shimmer with a glamour that comes only from silk.

Manufacturers are experimenting with finishes and treatments to move washable silk to still another level — a truly wash-and-wear fabric. In one treatment, fabric is dyed with reactive dyestuffs and treated with a finish that makes the fabric waterproof, spot and stain resistant and wrinkle resistant. The processor claims that the fabric still retains a soft silk hand.

Another process, a chemical treatment, occurs at the finishing plant when the fabric is dyed or printed. The treatment makes the fabric or blend machine washable, spot and stain resistant, shrink and wrinkle resistant and colorfast.

One of today's hottest fabrics is silk velvet. It is especially popular with American designers. Other important textures include puckered and crinkle effects. New resin treatments and colorfast dying are being used on heavier silks to make them washable.

Silk is being used in many unconventional ways. So check the latest fashion, care labels too, and start enjoying the benefits of these latest technological advancements.

Breast-Fed Infants Eat And Grow At Their Own Pace

WASHINGTON — Nursing mothers need not be alarmed just because their infants aren't gaining weight the way the standard growth curves suggest they should. The curves themselves may need revising, according to recent findings at the U.S. Department of Agriculture's Children's Nutrition Research Center in Houston.

Healthy breast-fed infants took in fewer calories and grew at a different rate than the national norms, reported nutritionist Dr. Cutberto Garza and research dietitian Janice E. Stuff. They studied 45 healthy, exclusively breast-fed infants from birth to eight months of age when the infants were getting solid food as well as breastmilk.

"Ours and other studies suggest that the Recommended Dietary Allowance for calories and the National Center for Health Statistics growth standards may need revision. They are based on older data from predominantly formula-fed infant populations," said Garza. He heads lactation research at the center, which is funded by USDA's Agricultural Research Service.

Thirty years ago only 15.9 percent of two-month-old infants in the U.S. were breast fed, while last year the figure was 40.8 percent, according to marketing research at Ross Laboratories in Columbus, Ohio.

Data for the growth standards were collected from 1920 to 1970 "when a chubby baby was considered a healthy baby," said Stuff. She also noted that "today's formulas are closer in composition to mother's milk."

Pediatricians often track infant growth against the NCHS standards, said Stuff, "but the margin of acceptable variation is wider than previously thought."

"And energy (calorie) requirements of breast-fed infants may be substantially lower" than estimates used to set the RDA, Garza said. "Breast-fed infants use their calories a lot more economically, but we don't know why or how."

Stuff said the study infants took in 100 percent of the RDA for calories during their first month, but dropped to 80 percent by the fourth month. They remained at that level after solid foods were introduced.

"We expected to see an increase in calories when foods were added," she said. "But the infants traded milk calories for food calories."

Stuff said growth patterns reflected the infants' calorie intakes but differed dramatically from NCHS standards. "They gained weight 5 to 10 percent faster than the standards through the first three months, recovering the weight all babies lose after birth. But then they began to drop behind the standards about 3 or 4 percent a month."

At birth, the 45 infants as a group ranked in the 70th percentile, meaning they were heavier than 69 percent of infants born in the United States, she said. By their eighth month, they had slipped to the 53rd percentile.

Stuff said, "Our infants were healthy. If they had illnesses, their growth would have fallen further behind the standards."

ANSWER - Ruth Etta Nolt requested a recipe for Kentucky Fried Chicken. Thanks to Donna Lencoski, Latrobe, for the following.

Kentucky Fried Chicken

3 pounds fryer parts, cut small
2 packages dry Italian dressing mix
3 tablespoons flour
¼ cup lemon juice
2 tablespoons oleo
8-ounces corn oil
⅔ cup shortening
1 cup milk
1½ cup dry pancake mix combined with
1 teaspoon paprika
½ teaspoon powdered sage
¼ teaspoon pepper

Wipe dry chicken, make paste of first 5 ingredients. Brush to coat chicken with paste. Cover skin side and underside well. Refrigerate covered for several hours. One and a half hours before sserving, melt oil and shortening. Keep oil at least 1-inch deep. Dip each paste-covered piece first in milk, then in pancake mixture. Place skin side down in very hot oil, brown until golden. Place in shallow baking pans in single layer, skin up. Spoon remaining milk over chicken. Seal with foil on 3 sides, leaving 1 side unsealed. Bake 40 minutes at 375 degrees until fork-tender. Remove foil entirely and bake 8 to 10 minutes more until crispy. Baste with milk and pan drippings often. Serves 6 to 8.

ANSWER - Rebecca Bechdel Mill Hall, requested a recipe for Dutch Cake. Thanks Patricia Hoffman, Catawissa, for sharing your grandmother's recipe.

Dutch Cake

1 cup sugar
1 tablespoon shortening
1 cup milk
2¼ cups flour
2 teaspoons baking powder
1 cup raisins, apples or peaches, sliced thinly

Mix batter well, add fruit, and pour into 2 round cake pans. Spread with melted butter, sprinkle on sugar and cinnamon. Bake at 350 degrees for 20 to 30 minutes or until lightly browned.

ANSWER - A reader from Manheim requested a recipe for making pork roll without nitrates. Thanks D.M. Stauffer of Loville, Md., for sending the following suggestions. She said substitute the Tender Quick with a mixture of ½ cup sugar and 1½ cup salt. The nitrates were needed as a preservative before freezer storage was available. She said it can also be packed into peanut butter jars with seal lids. Leave 1½ -inch head space, screw caps down tight, process jars in pressure canner for 30 minutes at 10 pound for small jars for 45 minutes for larger ones. They slide out easily to slice and the juice that forms is good flavoring for stew or white sauce to spoon over green beans, etc.

ANSWER - A reader from N.Y. requests recipes for a dandelion salad and one for frying dandelion blossoms in a batter. Thanks Mae Weber for sharing your recipe Question - I'd like to use buttermilk in my muffin recipes. How can I substitute buttermilk for milk? E.K., Frontenac, MN.

Answer - Use same measure of buttermilk instead of milk. An emergency substitution is 1 tablespoon lemon juice or vinegar plus enough whole milk to make 1 cup (let stand 5 minutes before using). Or use 1 cup whole milk plus 1¾ teaspoons cream of tartar. Or use 1 cup plain yogurt.

"Just Grazing"

Recently, while out for an evening that included dinner and the theater we were confronted with a new phenomena on the restaurant menu... grazing. Being the farm girl that I am, this of course struck my funny bone, although I did try to keep my composure amidst the elegant dining atmosphere. No, grazing is not a new food item for vegetarians. Rather it is a term that describes the diners choice of selecting one-half portion of two different entrees. Most people would be delighted with this additional choice. I, however, shuttered. You see, my husband deliberates endlessly over a menu, let alone one that gives a multiplicity of choices.

Decision making! Where and when do we obtain that skill? We are faced with many decisions everyday; from deciding how long to let the alarm ring before we turn it off to what hour we will select to retire for the day. We make decisions about what clothing to wear, what foods to eat, what items to read in the paper, and what to do with our leisure time. In our lifetime we also face many larger decisions such as who should I marry, who should watch my child, what bills will be paid when to stretch the pay check, and what home or car do I buy.

Decision making skills are learned. Children need opportunities to make decisions. They can begin decisions making skills when they are very small. A one year old may choose which toy he would like to play with. Parents need to provide opportunities for children to learn to make decisions because it is a life skill. There are everyday opportunities to provide a child with a choice. A child can choose which cereal he would like for breakfast or what clothing to wear that day. When given a weekly allowance, a child can decide what to buy with the money. When given a list of household jobs to be done, a child can choose which ones he would like to do. However, there are some guidelines to make decision making a positive experience.

Have you ever asked your child a question, giving them a choice and not getting the answer you wanted? For example, you may ask "Do you want to go to the store with me?" Your child may respond, "No!". However, you did imply a choice although you actually meant that you were going to the store and wanted your child to come along.

The rule here is to only give a choice when there really is a choice. In this way decisions are more positive because there is no right and wrong answer. One good way to insure that this happens is to avoid giving open ended choices. This can be frustrating and difficult especially for young children. Instead offer a limited choice such as, "Do you want to wear your red or your blue shirt?"

Another example of confusing choices is when we make a statement of what we want a child to do and tack on an "ok?" at the end. "Take a nap now, "ok?" The question at the end asks the child if it is agreeable with her, and then an answer of yes or no can seem to be the choice. However, we typically use this mode with no real choice intended.

As parents, teachers, grandparents and other adults who interact with children, we can take advantage of multiple daily situations which are productive for children in learning how to deal with the decision-making process. By only giving choices when we mean to give a choice and by structuring the choices, decision making skills will be learned.

And by the way, these techniques also work well with adults. A little suggestion of a few favorite combinations had us "grazing" and on our way just in time to see the curtain go up on the show!

More About Sibling Rivalry

UNIVERSITY PARK — "I've about had it! All they do is fight, squabble, push and shove and then come running to me. When will they get over this?" a parent asks.

Another parent remarks, "We have to expect a certain amount of disagreement, jealousy and resentment. The children are growing up and part of growing up is learning how to get along with others."

Two different views about rivalry between children in a family — sibling rivalry. It is not unusual to hear one parent decry the amount of friction or disagreement while the other parent in a family easily overlooks the incidents.

As long as there is more than one child in a family, we should expect to have some rivalry, teasing, quarreling and friction. There is bound to be competition; indeed, many argue that children need competition in order to be prepared for the world outside the home. Certainly children need to learn how to get along with others and those lessons in human relationships start in the home. It takes years, not weeks or months, for children to learn to share, to give and take, to forgive and to overlook inconveniences and problems.

The parent who indicated that the children "came running to me" after every fight or quarrel also said that when she did attempt to intervene or settle a dispute, very often the children suddenly united and she turned out to be the "bad guy." "They come fuming at one another and leave arm in arm fuming at me!" she added and then continued, "I never seem to learn to leave them alone and allow them to work out a solution to their problems. I get drawn into the conflict, usually I don't know enough even to comment on it, and am expected to issue the final judgment."

"Finally, I have begun telling the children when they try to get me involved as one or both come screaming to tell me what happened, that I will get involved, but both will suffer the punishment equally. I really don't want to know who did what to whom, first or second or whenever. The children then have a choice: either solve the disagreement themselves or get me involved. Recently, I have not been involved very much; and frankly, I'm surprised at how often they do solve their own problems."

For this parent, not getting involved works and probably will work for a time. But nothing seems to work forever and in every situation. As parents, we must be flexible and have several ways of dealing with conflicts between children.

If the dispute involves younger children, who are not able to share very well, then our strategy might simply be to separate the two children. (Incidentally, children don't share very well until they are at least four or five years old or older.) Get both of the children playing apart, if possible, in different rooms.

As parents, we should also learn to recognize the limits each child has in getting along with brother or sister. Make an effort to separate the children before the limits are reached.

Most children, when they are tired or not feeling well, need closer supervision. Many parents can easily recall a trip home from Grandma's or from a shopping mall. The two children ordinarily sit in the back seat of the car. They ordinarily play nicely together or at least stay apart. But it was a long day and they are tired. Feet wander, one looks at the other, arms swing and tears begin to flow. At times like this, we have to adjust and separate children. They simply do not have any reserve left and they will fight all the way home, regardless of how much yelling or threatening the parent may do.

Sibling rivalry can be eased somewhat in everyday situations by each child having the opportunity to develop his/her own unique talents. How many troubles start when brother and sister have "nothing to do" or sit and squabble in front of the TV for what seem like endless hours?

Some parents make a real effort to help each child in the family develop his/her own interests. It might mean inviting a special friend over to play, or learning a new game. The older child might join an organization like 4-H or do odd jobs for a neighbor.

Most rivalry or conflict is outgrown but for some children it might not disappear until adulthood. We as parents need to be understanding and extremely patient and willing to try different approaches when disagreements occur.

Zeppy The Cat

Zeppy the cat lives with Joan in her Lititz home. Zeppy was a stray cat whose mother brought her to Joan's door ten years ago. Both cats were hungry, but they would not let Joan touch them.

One cold winter night, Joan was afraid the stray cats would freeze outside so she brougt them into the house. Poor Zeppy! She was so scared she hid behind the sofa all night. Although it took many weeks before she began to sit on Joan's lap, Zeppy now loves attention.

She's very particular. She eats only one brand of cat food and she always wants things in order. As soon as Joan opens the cupboard door, Zeppy comes running for her food. If something does not smell or look the same to Zeppy, she paws the floor until Joan gives her another can.

Sometimes Zeppy can tell that her owner is upset about something. Then Zeppy follows Joan everywhere. That's Zeppy's way of telling Joan she loves her.

The Duck Brigade

Traffic screeched to a halt in Lititz when mother duck and her 14 ducklings decided to head for a swim in the park. The mother duck had hatched her ducklings beneath some bushes in front of the town square. Cars and trucks stopped for about 10 minutes while the duck brigade waddled across the street.

The New Stitch And Stir

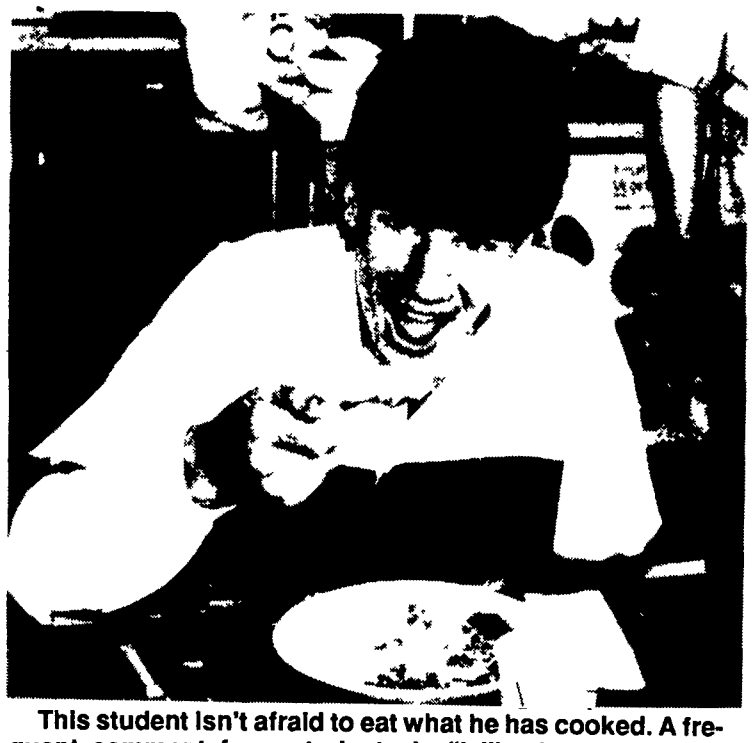
Home Economics Isn't What It Used To Be

BY LOU ANN GOOD

LANDISVILLE (Lancaster) — Schools across the nation lament the declining enrollment in home economics classes. But one county school, Hempfield High School, boasts remarkable participation in their classes. Why?

Teacher Mary Dietrich replies, "We've adapted our program to the needs of the society." She explained, "When I grew up, we were taught to be self-sufficent, to raise our own food and sew our own clothing." But times have changed. Dietrich added, "Society is more consumer-oriented, not producer."

In response to changing society needs, the five teachers that make up the home economics department instruct students on consumer skills such as interpreting food and clothing labels, wise shopping, and family living skills.



This student isn't afraid to eat what he has cooked. A frequent comment from students is "I like food labs best because I get to eat."

Home Ec. Exchange

Innovative activities dominate the lesson plans of these enthusiastic teachers. This week for example, Judy Getz exchanged her home economic students for those in the Spanish classes. As she taught them how to prepare Mexican foods, her students learned about the customs and culture of Mexico.

While students chopped tomatoes and filled tortillas, banter filled the air.

When Mrs. Getz remarked that she enjoyed working with this new batch of kids, a student retorted, "You seemed nice too until you made me do the dishes." It's this camaraderie that students list as one of the main reasons for participating in home economics.

Independent living

The Indepent Living course stresses personal management of income, expenses, taxes, insurance and good consumerism. Said student Tony Mallory, "It's a cool class. It's more free and relaxing. More classes should be like this."

Senior Lonna Ebersole added, "We're not just sitting here being brain dead like in other classes. This class prepares us for the world."

This week students were studying grocery ads and preparing a weekly menu by taking advantage of special buys and using all four food groups.

On occasion, students walk to a nearby grocery store and purchase the items needed for cooking projects. Department supervisor, Barbara Shenk, prefers to use as many community resources as possible. Consequently classes attend local fashion shows and visit fabric stores where they learn to choose fabric and accesories.

In textile and sewing classes, sewing has changed in the 21 years that Shenk has taught at the school. She remarked, "Technology has changed everything." A serger sewing machine eliminates many time-consuming steps that sewers of years ago needed to do. Sewing projects are no longer assigned; students can choose to sew whatever they desire. "If it isn't fashionable, they won't wear it," Shenk remarked. "It can't look homemade." The current rage is sewing a mod-looking waistless jumper with belt loops.

The department also teaches human development, interpersonal relationships and child development. An on-site day care center is held three mornings each week. It allows students hands-on experience in caring for toddlers. Missy Charles echoed the response of many participants when she said that "helping in the nursery was the highlight of the day." For her friend Lonna, the day-care center experience is propelling her in the direction of earning a degree in elementary education.

Technology has changed sewing in recent years. Here a textile and sewing student zips a jumper together on a serger machine. The serger eliminates many painstaking steps familiar to traditional sewers.

Home Economics

Shenk emphasized that child care is only one aspect that needs to be addressed in meeting current needs for family. "Education from birth to death should be part of the whole gamut of home economics." In class, students research effective ways for providing for the elderly and the homeless.

Culinary arts

Although much new subject material has been added to the program, classes in culinary arts remain the favorite for students. Again and again students affirm, "I like the food labs the best because we get to eat what we cook."

While that attitude is the incentive for enrollment, Getz pointed out that it remains an effective tool in helping students learn good nutrition and proper cooking methods.

This last decade has ushered in big changes in cooking methods and interests. Out of necessity, a complete course in microwave cooking is offered. Along with basic to advanced courses in culinary arts, there is an emphasis in cooking international cuisine. Sports nutrition teaches students how optimum nutrition relates to good athletic performance. Getz said, "Students are alerted to the fact that certain combinations of food nullify the nutritional aspects."

STEPS.

Surviving Today's Experiences and Problems Successfully is an introductory course in coping with family relationships, child care, resource management, consumerism, and decision making. Students learn such practical skills as writing effective complaint letters for defective merchandise and to be creative in learning to recycle.

Today's Housing and Interior Design

Students investigate styles of architectural designs and read scale drawings. Application of good design and furniture construction is reinforced by field trips to design centers and museums.

The teachers strive to expose students to as many life skills as they can. That is possible because the school's administration backs and encourages the department's efforts to make home economics a popular elective.

"But," Dietrich said, "We have to keep on top of things. We constantly need to let administration know where the needs and the concerns of the department stand." To do this teachers attend classes offered by universities and organizations where current trends and needs are identified.

From the information gleaned at these conferences, teachers annually update the program to accomodate the needs of a changing society. Shenk said, "It's hard to decide what curriculum to teach that will prepare our kids for life 20 years from now. The name of the game is making the choices attractive and appealing."

Diversity remains high on the list of criteria when it comes to planning electives. One teacher said, "Unlike courses like history and English, home economics is always changing." But it's this versatily and the teachers' love for students that make the courses exciting to teach. No doubt the enthusiasm that the teaching staff possesses carries over to the students.

Seniors Londa Ebersole, left, and Missy Charles, right, enthusiastically participate in the home economics innovative programs. Missy said, "These classes prepare us for the world. We don't sit here brain dead like we do in other classes."

The Spanish III class of Hempfield High School cooked a Mexican dinner as part of the class exchange program with the home economics department.

Ida's Notebook

Ida Risser

This morning I decided to read my April 1968 diary. Truly, I do not know how I survived the turmoil surrounding the raising of six children

They ranged in age from four to nineteen and three of them were teenagers. Four of them were in several 4-H Clubs and there were many, many meetings to attend plus 100 cases of cookies to sell. I was a leader in a 4-H Community Club and many hours of planning and phoning went into our first meeting. We had 30 members enrolled in ten different projects. Now that took a lot of time to keep everything on an even keel.

Our oldest daughter was in college and she got a summer job as a nurse's aide at a local hospital and was paid two dollars per hour. I bought twenty pounds of shad for .11¢ per pound and thirteen loaves of bread for .10¢ each. And each week we purchased five dozen eggs from a neighbor. It took a lot of cooking and baking to feed all of us. Even so our grocery bills were only five dollars a week. We had our own milk and at that time we were smoking our meat in the brick smokehouse in the middle of our garden.

There was so much washing, ironing and cleaning that I'm surprised that I found time to help at church and to be active in school organizations too. Much of my time was spent chauffeuring the children to music lessons, to friend's homes and also picking up machinery parts for my husband.

Of course, I had help to weed the garden and mow the yard. All of the children, boys and girls, enjoyed baking pies, cakes and cookies. They plowed the fields and completely renovated the tractor.

The year 1968 was my parents 50th wedding anniversary and guess who helped to plan that affair. It was also the year that my husband built a new milkhouse and a milk parlor which greatly reduced his work load but did nothing for mine.

OUR ORGANIC GROWERS AND BUYERS MEETING REVEALED A 15 TO 20% PREMIUM MARKET

for third year organic grain in large quantity by a Berks Co. buyer. Big demand for particular dairymen and poultrymen.

Also a large organic produce market north of Philadelphia and one in Philadelphia. The latter is planning on processing organic produce.

Farmers who use the kind of fertilizer and soil bacteria that we sell report superior crops both in quantity and quality, including keeping quality, like 250 to 300 bu. corn per acre, 90 bu. soybeans per acre, 10 extra bales alfalfa per acre, 29% protein hay, 3 to 4 times more sugar content over chemical grown alfalfa, no bugs nor crop diseases. One reports a 19,100 lb. herd average on 230 cows and buys no minerals except what is in the soybeans and brewer's grains. The minerals are in the feed as it used to be.

Now sharpen your pencil and figure the extra profit from all the above. For example — 20% higher yields and 20% higher price. Only $12 per acre for fertilizer after the first year. No pesticides.

If you can't smell the roses, there must be something wrong above your nose. If you don't need the extra profit, you can give it to poor people and missionaries,

ANOTHER GROWERS AND BUYERS MEETING

TIME: - Tues., May 3, 7:00 P.M. Sharp
PLACE: - Organic Center 217 S. Railroad Ave., New Holland, PA 17557 Ph. 717-354-7064

We expect to have more buyers than the other time, some food co-ops who don't require 100% organic and at least one bigger one. The market is developing fast. The consumers are learning fast why they are unhealthy and sick, and they blame the farmers who profess to be Christians, but have no conscience against poisoning their customers and their water. The people don't want their immunity destroyed to AIDS disease and cancer, etc.

The moral way is even much more profitable, both in this world and the next. If you think you would not be blessed by following the Creator's natural laws like our customers, then do you think He is a respector of persons and you are not eligible for the blessing? That would be embarrassing!

It was mentioned that the Leola Produce auction may devote a section to Organic.

Please be present to voice your opinion, and tell others about the good opportunity. Come very early to talk with the buyers personally.

4-H HAPPENINGS

Maryland Horse Bowl

Western Maryland's Allegany County continued its tradition of recent years as a strong contender in the statewide 4-H horse bowl competition. This year's 15th annual competitive equine knowledge even was held at the University of Maryland

Allegany County's senior team captured the state championship in its category. The team will now represent Maryland in regional competition during the Easter National 4-H Horse Roundup in Kentucky.

In addition, two members of the Allegany County team won top statewide honors in individual 4-H equine competitive events. So they are eligible to represent Maryland at Louisville in these categories.

Joyce Brinsfield, 18, of Cumberland, horse bowl team captain, was named senior champion in the horse demonstration contest. Her winning entry was titled "Not Just Stainless Steel." Last year, Joyce was senior winner in the state 4-H horse public speaking contest. She went on to win top national honors in the Louisville competition.

Mark Llewellyn, 15, of Cumberland, won the state senior 4-H horse public speaking contest this year for Allegany County. His talk was titled "Beaten Black for the Blue." Mark was captain of the Allegany County team that won the statewide junior 4-H horse bowl championship in 1986.

Other members of this year's winning senior team were a brother-sister duo, Jimmy and Michelle Cosgrove of Cumberland.

Placings for the horse bowl were, Seniors: 1. Allegany County, 2. Charles County, 3. Howard County; Juniors: 1. Howard County, 2. Dorchester County, 3. Queen Anne's County.

Members of the winning junior team were Margaret Cahill of Columbia, Beverly McCredy of Wheaton, Tommi Custer of Centennial Estates, and Lia Dean of Ashton. Lee Custer of Centennial Estates was the alternate member.

Kirstin and Danika Hyssong of Newburg won senior team honors for Charles County in the statewide 4-H horse demonstration contest. Lee and Margaret Custer of Centennial Estates won team honors for Howard County in the intermediate-age level contest. Amanda Darlak of LaPlata (Charles) was champion junior individual. Jennifer Pearce of Carney (Baltimore) earned first-place intermediate honors in public speaking.

Heffner Scholarships

Gwen Perry, Berks County 4-H Sheep and Lamb Club, and Scott Cormier, Silver Spurs 4-H Equestrians will be the first 4-H Jim Heffner Memorial Citizenship Scholarship.

The scholarship fund was established as a tribute to the outstanding leadership, recognition, and contributions, Heffner gave to both the Berks County 4-H and FFA programs. The annual scholarship is rotated yearly between 4-H and FFA towards their respective citizenship trainings in Washington, D.C.

The scholarship will sponsor a trip to Citizenship Washington Focus, a week-long 4-H training held at the National 4-H Center in Washington, D.C. Gwen and Scott will represent Berks County as part of a delegation of 55 Pennsylvania 4-H'ers.

Franklin County Spring Roundup

Approximately 150 4-H projects were exhibited at the Franklin County 4-H Center recently for the annual Spring Roundup. The exhibits represented a wide range of projects offered through the 4-H program. Exhibits of decorated cakes, baskets, ceramics, stenciled designs, tin punch, flower arrangements, miscellaneous other crafts, foods, computer, and woodworking projects were shown.

Karen Beaver presented a demonstration on microwave food preparation, which is a new project offered by 4-H. Bob Kessler, 4-H agent, explained how to complete the green form, which is the first step in competing for many county awards.

Best of show trophies were presented to Dawn Shank of uffield, macrame and advanced basketry; Sara Lesher of Duffield, knitting 1; Maggie Benedict of Duffield, stenciling and basketry; Holly Long of Welsh Run, basketry; Susan Lesher of Duffield, ceramics 1; Sandee Brechbill of Duffield, ceramics 2; Marla Hawbaker of Lucky Leaf, cake decorating 1; Lisa Stahl of Welsh Run, cake decorating 2; Bonita Angle of Welsh Run, cake decorating 3, flower arranging, tin punch, and computer; Angie Fogelsonger of Marion, tin punch; Brian Reichard of Lucky Leaf, wood working; and Karen Beaver of Qunicy Clovers, pillow design.

Memorial Fund Established

The Gwen Schwoyer 4-H Memorial Fund has been established by the Berks County 4-H Horse Council. The fund is to pay tribute to the contributions Schwoyer made to the 4-H Horse Program. Schwoyer was a key volunteer horse leader in Berks County for more than 13 years. Through her efforts as a leadre and president of the Berks County 4-H Horse Council, Schwoyer was instrumental in developing several county horse-related programs and facilities.

Donations received will benefit educational 4-H horse programs and materials for the county and a permanent recognition of Schwoyer at the Berks County 4-H Community Center show grounds. Donation are being accepted now. Contact Doris Reidenhour, R.D. 3, Box 3399, Hamburg, PA 19526.

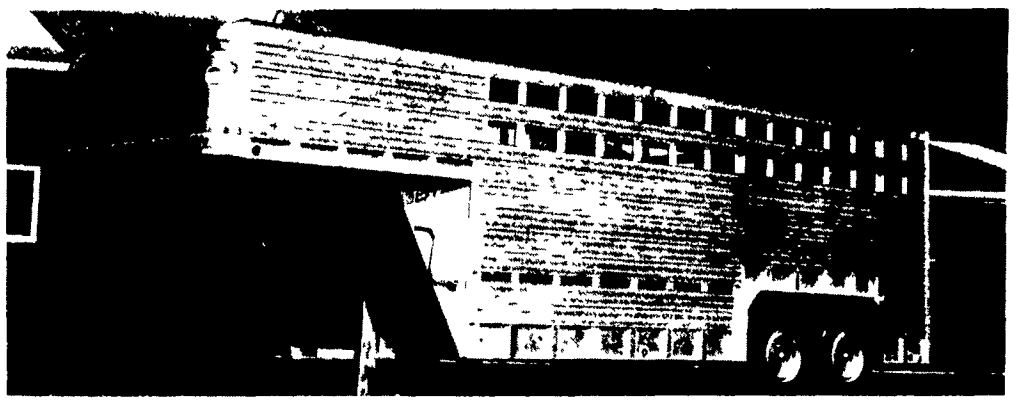
ALUMINUM GOOSENECK TRAILERS



20' Gooseneck Trailer

A versatile, lightweight, Eby aluminum stock trailer is built to provide years of maintenance free service. An Eby trailer is custom built to fit your individual hauling needs - No mass production! We use only quality components and strong alloy aluminum to manufacture what may be the last trailer you'll ever buy.

- LIGHTWEIGHT - Eby stock trailers are 25-35% lighter than comparable steel trailers. Less weight means better fuel mileage or increased payload.
- MAINTENANCE - Eby aluminum trailers won't rust. Welding and painting can cost you dollars in down time and repairs.
- DURABILITY - Eby trailers are built tough. Quality components and 6061 alloy aluminum provide the ruggedness required in a livestock trailer.

Research At New Jersey Ag Experiment Station Recommended For Funding

TRENTON, NJ — Increases in capital and operating funds to support environmental, agricultural and other research at the New Jersey Agricultural Experiment Station of Rutgers University's Cook College are recommended in a major report released here April 13.

The report of the blue-ribbon Committee for the Advancement of Agricultural Research and Technology (CAART) calls for a total of $156.1 million in new funding for capital construction, renovation and equipment needs at the station over the next five years.

The 42-member committee also recommends that the station's annual operating budget, which provides salary and other program support, be increased from the current $17.7 million to $44.6 million in the same time period.

"Today, 2 million American farmers grow three times as much food as 25 million farmers did 70 years ago," said Malcolm S. "Steve" Forbes Jr., co-chairman of the committee and president and chief operating officer of Forbes Inc. of New York City.

"We want that kind of progress to continue," Forbes said. "We are asking for increased support for New Jersey's experiment station because we believe this will bring enormous benefits to New Jersey and the nation."

Forbes said that the station's work supports the state's $15-billion food, agricultural and marine industries and makes key contributions to other elements of New Jersey's economy, ranging from pharmaceuticals to recreation and tourism. Together, these account for more than 200,000 New Jersey jobs.

The Committee for the Advancement of Agricultural Research and Technology is composed of state and national experts from outside Rutgers and represents such fields as agriculture, banking, business, conservation, politics, regional planning and science. It was appointed by the State University of New Jersey's Board of Governors in October 1987 to develop a financial strategy for the station.

Serving with Forbes as co-chair of the committee is another nationally respected business leader, Nicholas G. Marotta, president and chief executive officer of National Starch and Chemical Corporation of Bridgewater.

Marotta pointed out that a recent national study conducted in Virginia shows that $1 million spent on public agricultural research added $9 million to agricultural output and $11 million to the gross state product. It also generated enough work to give 300 people jobs for a year.

"There are no comparable rates of return in the private sector," Marotta said.

Forbes stated that American agricultural experiment stations are "one of the most dramatic examples in history of the application of academic research to economic productivity."

"New Jersey's experiment station provides such an array of essential services that if an institution such as the station didn't already exist, the best interests of the state would require that one be created," Forbes declared.

Joining Forbes and Marotta at a Statehouse news conference announcing the committee's findings were Dr. Edward J. Bloustein, president of Rutgers, and Dr. Stephen J. Kleinschuster, dean of Cook College and executive director of the experiment station.

The station conducts research and extension programs in such areas as environmental quality, production agriculture, natural resources, food technology, fisheries and aquaculture, human health and nutrition.

Of the $156.1 million in capital needs, $77.1 million is either already in hand or anticipated from several sources, including the $350 million Jobs, Education and Competitiveness Bond Issue that has been proposed for New Jersey's November election ballot.

The remainder of the money, $79 million, will be sought from the state and federal governments and other sources. The funding package will support such projects as an advanced technology center working in agricultural molecular biology, a proposed institute for marine and coastal sciences and a major new plant and life sciences building.

The report points out that only two major new research facilities have been built for use by station scientists since 1949.

"There hasn't been a broad base of state support for a comprehensive building program for major new research facilities at the station in the modern era of its long and distinguished history," said Forbes.

"The New Jersey Agricultural Experiment Station must have sufficient resources to apply the discoveries of the biological revolution of our own time to the agricultural and environmental problems of today and in the next century," he stated.

Established in 1880, the station's contributions over the years include the Nobel Prize-winning discovery of the antibiotic streptomycin and the development of the world-famous Rutgers tomato, artificial insemination techniques for the breeding of cattle, and vaccines that cured two virulent diseases threatening the poultry industry in the 1930s and '40s.

Beef Council Endorses Referendum

HERSHEY (Dauphin)— The Pennsylvania Beef Council has unanimously endorsed the upcoming Beef Checkoff Referendum, and urged dairy, beef and veal growers to get the facts and vote in the national referendum May 10, 1988.

The national checkoff program finances the producer-run promotion, education and research programs. By law, all cattlemen, including importers, invest equally in the program regardless of size or type of operation.

The program has focused on consumer information, promotional programs, research into the health and nutritional value of beef and veal, and development of new marketing information.

John Cope, a Cumberland County dairyman, who represents Pennsylvania on the National Beef Board, told the Beef Council, "We are at a crossroads for a great decision. We have finally taken seriously the idea that promotion marketing and research are a function of producers. And that's an accomplishment in itself.

"The entire industry, beef, dairy and veal, is working together for our common interests," he said. "And the higher beef prices have meant higher dairy prices, and increased herd values because of the beef referendum," Cope said.

Paul Heffner, Chairman of the PA Beef Council said, "It's been very successful. Because of our location and the large number of consumers in our markets, we have concentrated efforts on promotion and merchandising. And we've seen results."

"Increased consumer demand for beef and veal products has supported stronger market prices at levels where farmers can produce beef and veal at profitable levels," Heffner said.

According to J. Paul Espy, a Huntingdon County cattlemen who also serves on the Beef Board, the generic advertising campaign has shown results in a short time. "But we've got to continue these efforts for the long run to continue competing successfully for the consumer dollar," he warned.

"Last year, we spent $72 million in advertising. And retailers chipped in almost eight times as much -- $550 million for beef -- mostly in price advertising," Espy said. If we don't continue our program, retailers will lose incentive. It's not a question of either/or... it must be both."

"Without our generic advertising program, we'll soon lose the cattle industry and see a few corporations taking over the market. Passage of the referendum is essential. We're voting on our future, not just a promotion and research program."

Growing Potatoes In The Home Garden

HONESDALE (Wayne)—Most home gardeners like to include potatoes in their gardening plan. Potatoes are not the easiest vegetable to grow in the home garden, but your chances of success will be increased by following some time-tested guidelines.

Potatoes yield the highest and produce the best quality tubers in soils that are moderate in texture and have good drainage.

A soil test of the plot used to grow potatoes should be considered. The soil test will help to establish current levels of nitrogen, potash, phosphorus, calcium and magnesium in the plot of soil. The gardener can then add the necessary soil nutrients for the potato crop. Soil test kits are available from the Wayne County Extension Office at a cost of $5 per it.

If the soil has not been tested and the potato plow has been well fertilized in previous years, consider using a fertilizer with a 1-1-1 ratio of nitrogen to phosphorus to potash. Such as fertilizer would be 10-10-10, or 15-15-15, or any other fertilizer with equal fertilizer nutrient levels.

Apply the fertilizer at a rate of 2.5 to 3 pounds per 100 square feet or 33 feet of row. Seed potatoes should not be in direct contact with the fertilizer applied in the row. Adequate mixing of the fertilizer in the row is strongly encouraged. Also, some potato plots may require some lime to supply needed amounts of calcium and magnesium.

The use of livestock manure in a potato plot is discouraged since applications of manure may cause scab on potatoes.

Home gardeners should purchase only certified seed potatoes. Potatoes should show some sprouting before they are planted. Keeping the seed potatoes at 60° F will help to sprout the seed potatoes. See potatoes should be cut into 2-ounce block pieces with each seedpiece having one or more "eyes." Freshly cut seed potatoes should be allowed to "suberize" or "heal" before they are placed in the soil. Homeowners should also consider treating or dusting seedpieces with a fungicide to insure strong seedpieces and good stand establishment.

Tablestock potato varieties that are recommended for the home gardener include: Norland, Superior, Kennebec, Katahdin, Chieftain, Norgold Russet, Norking, Russet Burbank, Lemhi and Norkota.

The Norland variety is an early, red-skinned variety that produces average to good yields. The potatoes are smooth, somewhat rounded with shallow eyes. Norlands should be planted 10 to 12 inches apart. They have shown some susceptibility to ozone damage and have moderate resistance to scab.

Superior is a medium maturing, white-skinned variety that produces good yields of smooth potatoes with an attractive netting on its skin. Superiors should be planted between 9 and 11 inches apart. They have good resistance to scab problems.

Kennebec is a late maturing, white-skinned variety that continues to enjoy tremendous popularity among home gardeners. Kennebec has consistently produced high yields of smooth, uniform potatoes. Kennebecs should be planted between 8 and 11 inches apart. Kennebecs tend to set high tubers so it is necessary to continue to "hill" or mound the soil around each plant. Otherwise, they will affected by the sunlight, resulting in green potatoes. Kennebecs also have good storage qualities.

Katahdin is very similar to Kennebec in maturity and is also a white-skinned variety. Yields of Katahdins are very good, but this variety can be scab susceptible. Plant Katahdins between 8 and 11 inches apart.

Chieftain is a red-skinned, late maturing potato. It has outstanding yields and very good storage potential. Chieftains should be planted between 9 and 11 inches apart. This variety has some resistance to scab.

Norgold Russet, Norking, Russet Burbank, Lemhi and Norkota are all russet-type or baking-type varieties for the home gardener to consider. These varieties are medium to late in maturity and are oblong to somewhat rounded in shape. Storage potential is good for most russets. Home gardeners are encouraged to plant seedpieces of russet-type varieties at least 12 inches apart in the row to encourage larger tuber development.

Seed potatoes should be planted as soon as soil temperatures are between 45° F and 50° F. Row width should be between 32 and 36 inches. Fertilizer can be hand broadcasted in the row and mixed with the soil to prevent seedpiece "burning" by the fertilizer. The seedpieces are then covered with about three inches of soil.

Once the potato plants have broken through the soil, the potato plot should be "hilled" to help eliminate germinating weeds and also to prevent the developing tubers from getting sunburned.

Once the potatoes have started to grow vigorously, the home gardener's main concern will be to monitor the plot for weeds, diseases and insects.

Major potato plot weeds to deal with include: quackgrass, lambsquarters, pigweed and other annual broadleaf and grass type weeds. Local extension officers can offer weed control suggestions to the home gardeners for potato plot weeds.

Some major potato diseases to deal with include: early and late blight, mosaic diseases, rhizoctonia, common scab, bacterial soft rot, leaf spot, leafroll virus and verticillium wilt. The Extension Office can offer some assistance in terms of materials to use to help control or prevent potato diseases.

Major potato insects will include: the Colorado potato beetle, leafhoppers, aphids and flea beetles. A number of different garden dusts and sprays are available to the home gardener to control potato plant insects. A list of these insecticides isalso available from the Extension Office.

Potatoes can be dug when the tops are dead and dried. Potatoes should be "cured" before they are placed in winter storage. This can be accomplished by storing the potatoes for about a week or ten days at 6° F. Potatoes can then be stored at 38° F and 90% relative humidity.

By following these growing and management suggestions and trying some of the newer, higher-yielding potato varieties, your experience with growing potatoes in your home garden can be successful, profitable and nutritious.

Opinion Leaders Give Biotechnology High Marks

ST. LOUIS, Mo. — In the next 10 years, biotechnology and genetic engineering will have a greater economic impact on society than any other scientific or technical development, a survey of national opinion leaders shows. But the poll also indicates that the appreciation of biotechnology among opinion leaders exceeds their knowledge and understanding of it.

The poll, conducted for Monsanto Company by the Wirthling Group, surveyed 100 people who make or influence policy, including members of Congress and their staffs, Executive Branch officials, the media, academics and other influentials. Monsanto commissioned the poll in order to assess attitudes and perceptions toward biotechnology and its future impact.

When asked, unaided, which technology would have the greatest economic impact in the next decade, 28 percent of the respondents named biotechnology, followed by superconductivity at 24 percent and computer technology at 11 percent.

Nearly half of the respondents said they were very interested in biotechnology, but only 10 percent claimed that their understanding of it was very good.

Almost all of the respondents said they were "very interested" or "somewhat interested" in biotechnology. But only half of the opinion leaders polled felt that their understanding of biotechnology was "good" and only 10 percent said it was "very good." When asked specifically what they would like to know more about, 26 percent mentioned its economic effects. Another 21 percent wanted more information in general on developments and the progress of research.

Huston: Beef Ads Have Positive Results

HERSHEY (Dauphin)— Beef producer-funded artucles and ads are making a positive impression on consumers both at home and abroad, according to John Huston, President of the National Livestock and Meat Board.

Huston told the Pennsylvania Beef Council (PBC) that per capita expenditures on beef were up five percent in the fourth quarter of 1987 compared to the same period in 1986. He said, "growth in consumer spending has continued. Per capita expenditures on beef in the first three months of 1988 were up over both the fourth quarter of last year and over the same period in 1987."

"That's the first growth in per capita spending on beef products in years and years," Huston said. He noted that the figures were "especially significant" in that prices showed a real increase after adjusting for inflation at a time when the total supplies of beef, pork, veal, chicken and other meat products is near a record.

Bob Coleman, PBC executive director told the council that advertising paid by the Beef Checkoff Program has made nearly five billion consumer impressions during the last 15 months.

"The 'Beef. Real food for real people,' advertising campaign has been running on prime time network television, on network radio and as part of a national print campaign since January 1987," Coleman said. "Personalities such as James Garner, Willard Scott and Paul Harvey have promoted beef and veal to American and foreign consumers."

"The bottom line is that we've managed as an industry to reach 98 percent of our target audience -- the "light beef users"-- 49 times during those 15 months," Coleman said.

"What's even more important is that we're seeing a return to beef. The Checkoff funded advertising effort is a major part of what made that happen."

In terms of impact, all four television ads outscored all others tested, with as many as 87 percent of viewers recalling the commercials. Over half the viewers sampled said the commercials made them hungry for beef.

In advertising targeted to health care professionals, the campaign's first magazine ad received an award from the Journal of the American Dietetic Association, outscoring all other ads in the issue by 18 percent and getting the highest score (64 percent) of any ad in the food category in the past two years.

Fully 63 percent of consumers surveyed recently said they expect to eat beef more frequently this year. A big reason for that is the fact that 24 percent more people this year than last year agreed that beef is "good food for the way I live today."

Coleman said articles and advertisements placed by the Beef Promotion and Research Program in Japan are being positively received by consumers there, too.

A survey conducted by the U.S. Meat Export Federation showed 89 percent of Japanese consumers said the ads made a good impression and 45 percent said the ads made them want to try American beef.

"This positive awareness of U.S. beef will result in increased sales," Coleman said.

"On Japanese restaurant has already added American beef to its menu as a result of the producer-funded campaign. The Company, considered an innovator in the Japanese food business, has more than 1,500 outlets," he said. This kind of effort and success will continue if the Checkoff referendum results in a positive vote on May 10, Coleman noted.

USDA Issues Rules For Highly Erodible Land

1985. Many will be able to develop and apply a conservation plan that will allow them to plant highly erodible land to grasses or trees either on their own or in conjunction with the Conservation Reserve Program.

Before January 1, 1990, or until two years after USDA's Soil Conservation Service prepares soil maps for a particular area, producers will not lose eligibility under the highly erodible land conservation provisions for farm program benefits as the result of production of an agricultural commodity on highly erodible land that was: (a) cultivated to produce any of the 1981 through 1985 crops of an agricultural commodity; or (b) set-aside, diverted or otherwise not cultivated under a program administered by the secretary of agriculture for any such crops to reduce production of an agricultural commodity. These exemptions allow affected persons to continue the production of agricultural commodities on highly erodible land through January 1, 1990, (or until two years after the Soil Conservation Service maps the land) without having to actively apply a conservation plan to retain program eligibility.

The provisions of the Food Security Act of 1985, which today's interim rule implements, are commonly referred to as conservation-compliance, sodbuster and swampbuster provisions. Sodbuster provisions apply to any highly erodible land cultivated for crop production since December 23, 1985. swampbuster provisions apply to the conversion of wetland after December 23, 1985, for the purpose of producing agricultural commodities.

However, farmers who cultivated highly erodible land or converted wetland after December 23, 1985, and planted a crop before the date the interim rule is published will remain eligible for USDA program benefits for the 1986 crop year. To retain eligibility for subsequent crop years, however, the farmer must apply an approved conservation system on the highly erodible land. With regard to wetlands converted after December 23, 1985, the farmer cannot, except under limited circumstances, produce agricultural commodities on such lands after the date of publication of the interim rule and retain eligibility for farm program benefits.

There are an estimated 345 million acres of highly erodible agricultural land in the United States, of which 118 million acres are existing cropland and 5 million acres are wetlandw with a medium-to-high potential for conversion to agricultural use.

Additional details of the interim rule will be published in the June 27 Federal Register. The interim rule will provide for a 60-day comment period. The public may comment on the interim rule by writing the Director, Cotton, Grain and Rice Price Support Division, ASCS-USDA, Box 2415, Washington, DC 20013.

Farm Credit News

The Farm Credit System

WASHINGTON, DC — Improving economic conditions in the nation's agricultural sector were cited by Farm Credit System officials during recent Congressional hearings set to study the outlook for struggling farmers. The hearing, focusing on the beneficial imipact to farmers of recent legislation, was one of several scheduled by key Congressional committees.

In testimony before the House Agriculture Sub-Committee on Conservation, Credit and Rural Development, Gene L. Swackhamer, president of the Farm Credit Banks of Baltimore and chairman of both the Farm Credit System's Funding Corporation and Financial Assistance Corporation, noted that several encouraging factors point to a more favorable outlook for agriculture.

One of the most significant of the favorable trends, according to Swackhamer, is the improvement in the cost of the funds the Farm Credit System obtains for lending purposes.

Swackhamer said, "The adverse cost spreads of 100 to 150 basis points (100 basis points equal 1% of interest) above the Treasury yield curve of latte 1987 have now narrowed to around 50 basis points above Treasury issues and are continuing to improve." He attributed much of the restoration of investor confidence in Farm Credit securities as a reaction to passage of the Agriciultural Credit Act of 1987.

Responding to questions from the committee, Swackhamer said, "I am pleased with the direction of recent events and the return of confidence in the agricultural industry." While noting that it was perhaps too early to claim full recovery for the Farm Credit System, he reported that each passing month has brought improvements to loan volume, profit performance and reductions in nonperforming assets.

Testifying on the initial phases of implementing the Agricuiltural Act of 1987, Swackhamer said, "The Funding Corporation is pursuing a number of new funding initiatives and more efficient and innovative cash and debt management practices that will better match the needs of borrowers with those of our investors."

Also testifying before the House committee was Sam Eberly, chairman of the Farm Credit Council, and Edward Breihan, chairman of the Special Committee on Banks for Cooperatives Structure.

Swackhamer was elected chairman of the Farm Credit System Funding Corporation and Financial Assistance Corporation following a recent shareholder's meeting in Denver, CO. He will serve as chairman through March, 1989.

Friends Of 4-H Contributions In 1987 Total $116,800

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre) — Contributions to Friends of 4-H reached $116,000 in 1987, providing funds for 4-H programs that benefit young people across PA.

Friends of 4-H unites enthusiastic supporters of 4-H, who help raise resources to support 4-H programs in PA. Donors value what 4-H stands for — youth development, leadership training and service to community and country. Pennsylvania 4-H is the youth component of Penn State Cooperative Extension.

"Many supporters were involved with 4-H as youths," explains Keith Stevens, executive director of Friends of 4-H. "They remember the good experiences they had and want others to have the same opportunities." Funds donated to Friends of 4-H have provided countless opportunities for 4-H'ers across Pennsylvania.

In 1987, combined gifts from the Glatfelter Insurance in York Co., Cigna Foundation, and Westinghouse Corporation, totaling $50,000, benefited the PA Council Horseback Riding for the Handicapped (PCCHRH) program, sponsored in part by 4-H. The PA Council provides therapeutic horseback riding to the physically and/or mentally challenged of PA. 4-H volunteers who participate in the riding programs grow in their understanding of the needs of the handicapped.

Contributions over the past three years of more than $15,000 from the Katherine McKenna Foundation have helped revise and modernize the plant science program of 4-H, allowing more young people to get involved.

Nearly 45 million Americans have participated in 4-H across the United States since the program began in the early 1900's. Today 4.5 million young people are involved in 4-H, the largest educational program for youth in America.

For more information on Friends of 4-H or to make a contribution, contact Keith Stevens, Executive Director, 236 Agriculture Administration Building, University Park, PA 16802, or call (814) 863-2831, or Contact Roxanne F. Price, York Co. 4-H Coordinator, 112 Pleasant Acres Road, York, PA 17402, or call (717) 757-9657.

With the 2615 series you get even more rugged construction features and a selection of equipment for smoother, faster cutting behind your tractor

Axles A uniform cutting height across the full width of the cutter is the result of automatically adjusting wing axles No turnbuckle adjustment is necessary The rubber cushion axle mount provides extra shock load protection

Height adjustment Hydraulic height adjustment is available The single hydraulic cylinder controls cutting height from 1 14 inches Hydraulic wing lift is standard equipment

Independent wing lift A 3 spool hydraulic valve is available for tractors with one or more outlets With this selection you get independent wing lift and height adjustment

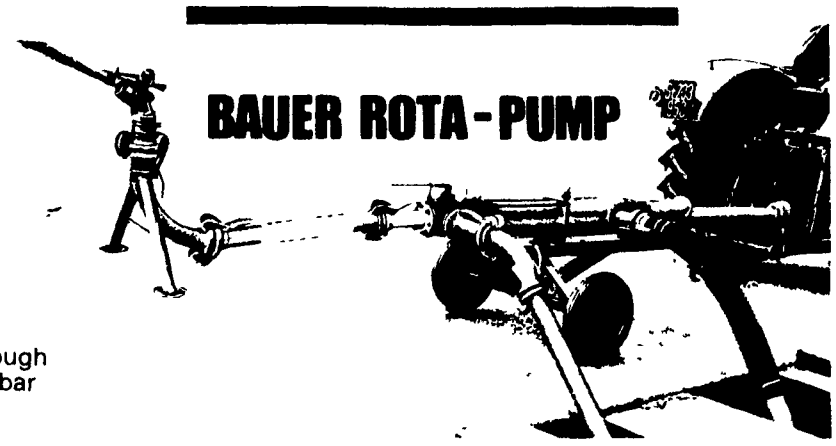
PUMP, Don't Haul, Your MANURE!

...you can pump and spread in one day what would take a week to haul, regardless of field conditions.



PUMPS any type of manure
Dairy, Chicken, Beef, Veal, Hog
High Performance Bauer helical rotor pumps are self-priming and can pump through irrigation pipe and spreader nozzles (shown), or through tractor-mounted Honeybar injectors for direct injection into soil, eliminating run-off.

TICO HONEYBAR INJECTOR
New system injects* liquid manure into soil, eliminating run-off, odor problems and loss of nitrogen value associated with other spreading methods. Honeybar attaches to tractor 3 pt. hitch—is fed directly from lagoon or storage tank through irrigation pipe and flexible hose. Designed for one-man operation Components can also be used for hose reel irrigation system.
*(injects up to 600 gpm depending on ability to supply material to pump)

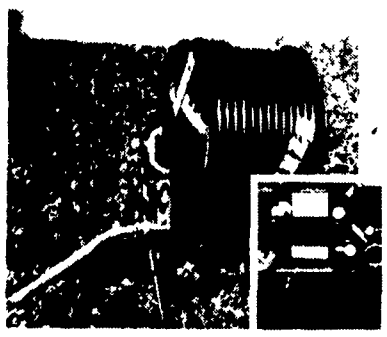
MAGNUM Self-Priming Chopper Pump
has a powerful chopping and shredding device to reduce animal and vegetable matter to a pumpable non-clogging slurry Tractor pto-driven models can pump up to 880 gal/min Other models available pump up to 1012 gpm



BAUER RAINSTAR REEL IRRIGATOR
can irrigate up to 1/3 mile long and up to 400 ft. wide, or 14 acres in one run. And, depending on model and pipe size, up to 800 gpm and up to 50 acres per day coverage. Gets the water to the crop when needed.

TICO also offers all other types of irrigation systems
• Wheel Row • Center Pivot • Giant Sprinkler • Trickle • Solid Set • Hand Move
Tico quick-couple irrigation pipe is the only irrigation pipe made to withstand pressures up to 300 psi

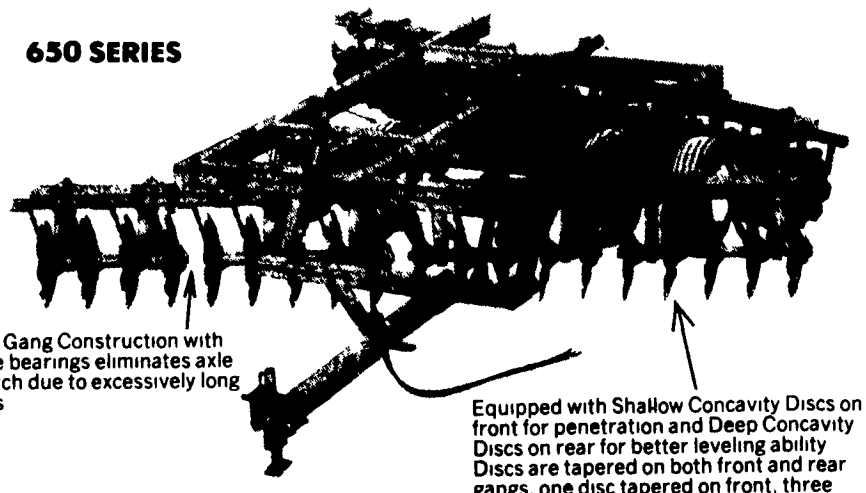
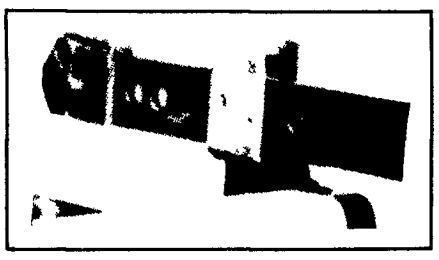
650 SERIES



Split Gang Construction with more bearings eliminates axle stretch due to excessively long axles

Equipped with Shallow Concavity Discs on front for penetration and Deep Concavity Discs on rear for better leveling ability. Discs are tapered on both front and rear gangs, one disc tapered on front, three discs tapered on rear

HEAVY-DUTY LEVELING OFFSET HARROWS



Adjustable depth control holds the cutting depth constant. Then simply lock bar for transport to eliminate wear and tear on hydraulic transport cylinders on those rough and rocky roads

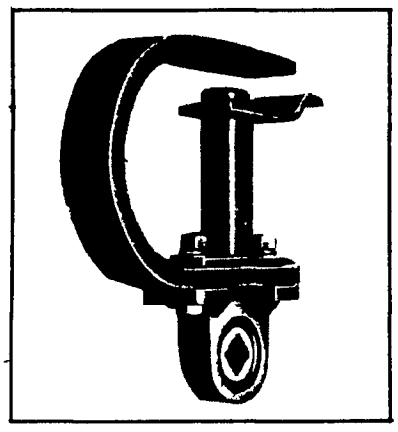
Positive adjustment leveling from front to rear is no problem. Weight is shifted by these Spring Rods to produce a smooth finish

OUR OFFSET LEVELS LIKE A TANDEM

- Wide Range of Adjustments
- Tapered Discs
- Disc Concavity
- Spring Leveling Rods

RESULT...

Furrows And Ridging In The Center Is Virtually Eliminated.
A Tandem That Cuts Like An Offset Leaves A Furrow.



FLEXIBILITY

Spring Bearing Hangers With Built-In Limiters Absorb Shocks But Don't Flex So Far That They Break!

Students Selected For National Coop Seminar

DOYLESTOWN, PA — Three area high school students were selected to attend the National Institute on Cooperative Education, July 26-29, at the Holiday Inn-Genesee Plaza Hotel in Rochester, N.Y.

The students, representing their 4-H clubs and Future Farmers of America chapters, were among 21 participants attending the annual Cooperative Business Seminar for Teens. Sponsored by the Bucks-Montgomery PAFC Council, the seminar was held March 23 at Delaware Valley College in Doylestown.

Among the Bucks-Montgomery PAFC youth delegates selected to attend the 1988 NICE conference are, from left, Jim Wabals, Coopersburg; Michael Ceregliano, Philadelphia; alternate Eric Jones, Philadelphia; and alternate Jennifer Meyer, Gilbertsville.

The three youths scholars, as they will be called at the NICE conference, are: Jim Wables, Coopersburg, Springtown 4-H Club; Brian Frederick, Perkasie, Upper Bucks FFA Chapter; and Michael Ceregliano, Philadelphia, W.B. Saul High School FFA Chapter.

Alternates are: Jennifer Meyer, Gilbertsville, Montgomery County 4-H; Jeremy Molnar, Quakertown, Upper Bucks FFA Chapter; Heidi Litschauer, Kintnersville, Upper Bucks FFA; and Eric Jones, Philadelphia, W.B. Saul High School FFA Chapter.

The youth scholars and alternates were selected to attend the NICE conference based on their school and community activities and the score they received on a quiz about cooperatives.

The Bucks-Montgomery PAFC Council is a part of the Pennsylvania Association of Farmer Cooperatives. The Cooperative Business Seminar for Teens is held to teach high school students about cooperatives and the services they provide their members.

Effects Of Pesticide Use To Be Studied

University Park, Pa. — Some states are introducing legislation against playing in puddles in an effort to protect children and pets from being exposed to nutrients and pesticides that have been applied to lawns, according to a Penn State researcher.

"In New York, legislation has been introduced to keep children and pets from playing in such puddles," Dr. Thomas L. Watschke, professor of turfgrass science, said.

To find out more about the presence of pollution in runoff and its affects on water quality, Penn State scientists have established a research facility, with support from the University, the U.S. Geological Survey and the Pennsylvania Turfgrass Council. Begun in 1982, the research center was completed in 1985.

Watschke is leading a team of researchers who are studying the rate that water runs off from and infiltrates through seeded and sodded plots. Water is collected from both runoff and infiltrate and is analyzed for the nutrients and pesticides that have been applied.

Rainwater percolates through the ground before reaching underground aquifers, the porous layers of rock that hold underground water. During this process, the water comes in contact with organic matter, soil particles and microorganisms which all interact in a positive way with substances in the water. On impervious surfaces, such as rooftops, streets, sidewalks, parking lots and driveways, many substances can become concentrated.

"Rainstorms have a purging effect on the petrochemical byproducts and heavy metals that can collect on impervious surfaces, carrying them with the runoff. These pollutants affect storm water quality, which tends to decline as urbanization increases," said Watschke.

When land is developed for homes or shopping centers, the natural surfaces are changed, more impervious surfaces exist. Rainwater that previously infiltrated a watershed to recharge groundwater now runs off the surface, taking with it soil and any substances that may have been deposited on the surface.

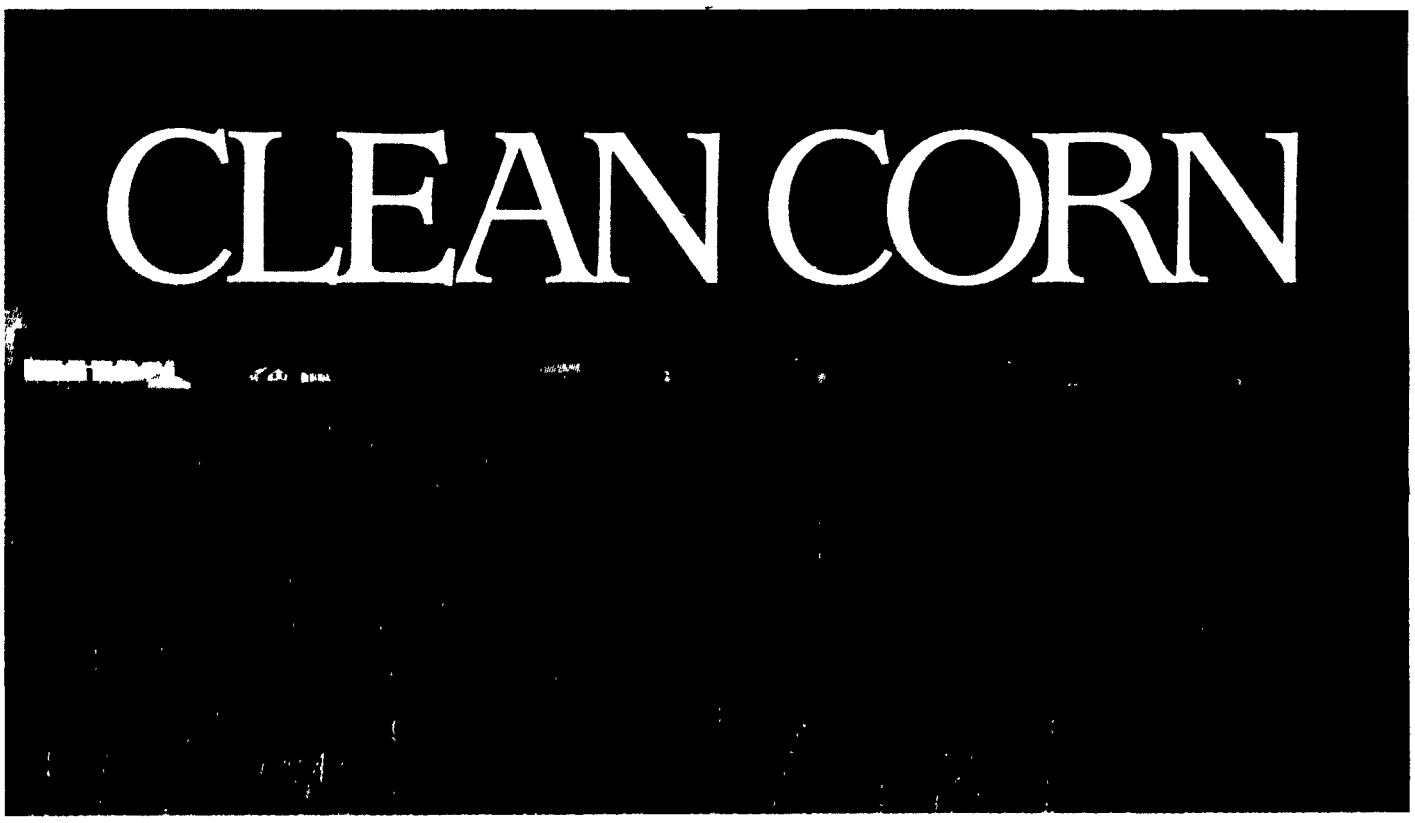
"Preliminary data from our research on plots that were seeded with grass or covered with sod show that runoff is reduced on grassy areas, compared with impervious surfaces," Watschke said. "Water slows down when it hits thick vegetation, and any soil particles settle out in the grass."

The better the turf, the less the runoff. Grassy areas also reduce the amount of pollutants in the rainwater runoff by removing the sediment, which often carries these potentially undesirable particles.

The most effective type of vegetation for slowing the velocity of runoff and improving the quality of the runoff is sod, he said. When sod is placed on land, it immediately binds with the surface, and root growth begins within hours.

Seeding an area, on the other hand, can be an "agonizingly slow" process that can damage the surface soil structure, he said.

"In the future, land developers may be required to use sod in certain circumstances to prevent any changes in the ecosystem downstream from the development," he said.



CONTROL TRIAZINE-RESISTANT WEEDS WITH PROWL®.

You want a good, clean stand of corn. A crop you can really take pride in.

That means getting control of triazine-resistant weeds, including pigweed and lambsquarters. So go with the herbicide that gets the job done. PROWL® herbicide. It not only helps control triazine-resistant weeds but other problem grasses and certain broadleaves such as foxtail and velvetleaf. And with PROWL, you don't have to worry about carryover.

You can surface-apply PROWL preemergence, or apply early postemergence in a tank mix with atrazine. Do NOT incorporate PROWL in corn.

So if you want a good, clean, healthy stand of corn, start with PROWL and you'll finish with pride.

In previous columns, I've examined the possible uses of a farm business microcomputer and suggested some ways in which you can identify your information needs before you make the (sometimes) scary decision of buying a computer. If you have decided to seriously investigate the possibility of buying a computer, then read on. But don't get too anxious about making a decision this very day. You should carefully evaluate the software and hardware alternatives available before making a purchase. Careful planning and evaluation may save you from having an expensive paperweight in your office. A reasonable time frame for making the decision (from search to purchase) would be approximately 6 months. On the other hand, don't put off a decision because the microcomputer world is changing so much. I've known people to put off a purchase decision year after year, claiming that they are waiting for the 'next big wave' of computer technology at cheaper prices. Those folks don't seem to think about the profit opportunities they're missing by not having a computer now.

Microcomputer Software

'Software' indicates the computer programs or set of instructions that run the hardware (equipment), ask for the data input and print the reports you want to use. The most critical activity you can accomplish in purchasing a computer system is the evaluation and selection of software which accomplishes the information functions you want. This brings me to Pease's First Computer Commandment:

Choose the hardware which runs the software you want

That is, find the software which provides you with the information you need in the time frame and presentation format you require. Then choose microcomputer hardware which will run that software. Don't be paralyzed (and likely swindled) by purchasing a particular brand of microcomputer without determining that software exists which will be the real source of profit which pays for the computer system. My rule of thumb is to spend at least 3/4 of your search time on finding the best software. So if you spend 6 months evaluating computer hardware and software, at least 4 1/2 months of that should be spent in looking at software.

Information Sources

How to find the software which can accomplish what you want? There are several sources of information which might be available to you. Probably the best source of information about software is the experience of other managers. You may know some friends who are using computers on their farms. Those folks may have the most unbiased view available of the usefulness of computers for practical decision making. If they think computerization has been a success, make sure you understand what changes have been made possible through computer use and what part of their enthusiasm is 'computer infatuation'. If they think it's been a failure, try to determine whether the problem has really been the computer, or whether the failure is mostly their own fault.

Computer user groups can also be a source of information about software. Most commonly, these groups are composed of personal computer users, not business users. Often these users are interested in showing off their own skills. The Game Player and the Power Programmer are two such birds that inhabit the roost. However, occasionally there are business users and farm business users who can provide valuable information and demonstrations of software. Local computer dealers sometimes provide good information about software, but you should always remember that they want to sell you a product. Most of these folks are genuinely helpful and honest, but every once in a while you'll find a reject used car salesman selling computers. Software information is also available through some county and state Cooperative Extension Service employees. They have experience with some computer programs, and don't have any particular axe to grind. Yet another source of good information are the various publications produced by Doane's Information Services (11701 Borman Drive, St. Louis, MO 63146). The past few years have seen the demise of most agricultural computing newsletters and magazines, and Doane's Agricultural Computing newsletter ($72/year, 12 issues) is the best available source of background information, descriptions and reviews of computer hardware and software, and tips for avoiding common pitfalls. Doane's Agricultural Computing Source Book is a collection of some of the best articles from the newsletter over the past few years, and it provides very good information on setting up your farm computer system. No farmer who is serious about purchasing computer software should be without Doane's Agricultural Software Directory.

Gypsy Moth Spraying

DOVER, DE — The Department of Agriculture's 1988 Gypsy Moth Suppression Project will begin on or about April 25, according to program manager Linda T. Bradley.

"The exact date will depend on weather conditions, leaf development and caterpillar hatch," Bradley explained.

Aerial applicators will begin spraying woodlots in Sussex County and southern Kent County and work their way north. The entire project is expected to last seven to 10 days.

Small airplanes and helicopters will apply Dimilin to inland wooded areas first. Dimilin (diflubenzuron) is an insect growth regulator that prevents the formation of new skin during the caterpillar's molting process. Planes and helicopters then will apply B.t. (Bacillus thuringiensis) to wetland areas and residential developments targeted for spraying in New Castle County around May 1. B.t. is a biological insecticide which controls caterpillars by interfering with their feeding process.

Both insecticides are registered with the EPA and are not harmful to people or animals. However, it is advised that residents remain indoors while spraying is under way.

Spraying will begin at dawn and continue as long as weather conditions are favorable, Bradley explained. Some spraying may take place in the afternoon if necessary.

Delaware Extension Presents Annual Awards

NEWARK, DE. — Delaware Extension professionals honored four of their colleagues and a Kent County grain producer in a special award ceremony during the recent annual Extension conference at the University of Delaware's north campus in Newark.

Olin Gooden of Woodside, Del., received the Friend of Extension award for his long-standing support of Cooperative Extension programs. A charter member of the Kent County Extension Advisory Council, Gooden is also a member of Del-CARET, a newly formed statewide council on agricultural research, Extension and teaching. He has cooperated on numerous Extension demonstration plots and has held several offices with the Kent County Farm Bureau. In selecting him for this award, Extension professionals noted that Gooden is "an early adopter and promoter of change in his farming community."

Dr. Richard Taylor, Extension agronomist and Dr. Don Tilmon, Extension farm management specialist, were also recognized at the in the university's Agricultural Sciences Communications office in Newark, were honored as outstanding support staff.

Taylor, who joined the Delaware Extension System in 1985, was named outstanding new specialist for the support he has given county agricultural agents and farmers in solving crop production problems and in investigating alternative crops for their potential on Delmarva. One of his major accomplishments has been the development of guidelines for the production of grain sorghum in Delaware. In field trials comparing corn with sorghum, he demonstrated that sorghum is an economically viable alternative to corn and an excellent rotation crop with soybeans, particularly on the droughty soils of southern Delaware and on cyst-infested soybean ground.

Tilmon received the outstanding program accomplishment award for his successful efforts in helping farmers improve their management skills. With the help of other Delaware Extension specialists, he adapted a Clemson University computer program which analyzes crop production costs, renamed it DELCROP and used it to develop budgets for most of the commercial crops grown in Delaware.

Using this and other computer programs, Tilmon has assisted farmers in financial planning, making crop production decisions, choosing farm program participation, selecting alternate enterprises and managing risks. In honoring him, co-workers noted that Tilmon's DELCROP tool, supported by fact sheets and continually updated software, has been well received by farmers, bankers and county Extension staff. He has also played a leading role in making multiperil insurance available on many Delaware crops and in teaching farmers how to use it as a risk management tool.

At the annual conference, employees who provide essential support services for Extension professionals are also recognized. Smith, who has worked in the Ag Communications unit since 1981, and Ohrel, who has served as duplicating specialist since 1985, were cited for the care they take with the quality of the printed products they produce.

The awards program is sponsored by the Delaware chapter of Epsilon Sigma Phi, the national honorary Extension fraternity.

Court Decision Says Farm Couples Are Not One Person

WASHINGTON, D.C. — U.S. District Court Judge Joyce Hans Green recently struck down a United States Department of Agriculture regulation that treats farm husbands and wives as one person for determining eligibility for federal farm program payments. Judge Green's ruling reverses an 18-year USDA policy and repudiates the ruling of a similar 1981 court case that upheld the marriage regulation because of the "economic interdependence of married couples." Unless Judge Green's ruling is reversed on appeal, USDA will now have to treat married couples the same as farm partnerships or any other arrangement that can increase an individual's eligibility for farm program payments. USDA has until April 18 to appeal the decision.

The effect of Judge Green's ruling may be limited. It was not retroactive and a new law that was passed by Congress in late 1987 changes certain farm program eligibility starting in the 1989 crop year. Under the new law, married couples shall be considered as one person for the purposes of receiving federal farm program benefits except in cases where spouses were separately engaged in unrelated farming operations prior to their marriage and those farms remain separate after the marriage. Judge Green's ruling does not effect the new law but in a footnote to her decision on the marriage regulation, she insinuated that it,

First Delmarva Poultry Seminar Hosts Hundreds

GEORGETOWN, DE — More than 400 people, mostly poultry growers, attended the first Delmarva Poultry Industry, Inc. (DPI) Grower Committee Educational Seminar in Salisbury, Maryland on March 2, 1988. The meeting, open to the public, was the first of its kind in quite some time on Delmarva. It was held to answer needs identified by the Grower Committee survey of last year which indicated DPI could and should be doing more for the nearly 3,000 chicken producers on Delmarva. Because it was the first of its kind and because no advanced registration was needed, organizers were uncertain what the response would be. When the auditorium was filled as the program began, members of the Grower Committee realized the type of program they planned was needed.

The three hour seminar began with DPI President Dr. Keith Rinehart reviewing what DPI does for growers. He said much of the association's work is not done directly with growers, but all the work benefits them because they, as the producers of the chickens, are helped by work on environmental matters, disease prevention and control, by improvements in nutrition, breeder, hatchery, processing, transportation and growout areas, and through aggressive chicken promotions.

The segment on grower management presented ideas on how growers can better manage their farms. Dr. William D. Weaver, extension poultry specialist with Virginia Tech, talked about the fundamentals of ventilation and why proper poultry house ventilation is so important in the production of a healthy, low cost chicken. Dorchester County, Maryland poultry grower Dave Paulson and Dr. Ralph Knowles of the Maryland Department of Agriculture discussed biosecurity on farms and the importance of keeping unwanted visitors off farms. They agreed that a biosecurity program is necessary for farmers to protect their investments. DPI Grower Committee Chairman Harry J. Mitchell of Berlin, Maryland was moderator for a panel discussion on management styles and techniques. Three poultry growers reviewed things they do to help them. Alan Wilber, a grower near Salisbury, Maryland, works with his brother and father on three locations with old chicken houses with a total capacity of 97,000 birds. Wilber, a DPI brother, said each house has its own management requirements and that meant special attention for each. Jim Baxter of Stockley, Delaware, a DPI Grower Committee member, has eight new houses and several old ones with a total capacity of 385,000. He talked to his fellow growers about the automated equipment they have and why that equipment is necessary on such a large poultry farm. Bill Bruning of Snow Hill, Maryland, another Grower Committee member, works with family members on their grain and poultry farm. They use tenants to manage the 105,000 capacity chicken houses on a day to day basis. He said that was the best way to work with the chickens during the spring to autumn crops season.

Well received at the seminar was the segment on environmental matters. DPI Executive Assistant Bill Satterfield told the capacity crowd what DPI has done and is doing in the area of protecting the environment. Much of that work is cooperating with university researchers on finding better ways to dispose of dead birds. Dr. Dennis Murphy, extension poultry specialist with the University of Maryland, talked about his work on composting dead birds with poultry manure to produce a better quality fertilizer for grain and horticulture crops. Talbot County, Maryland poultry grower John Altvater, who is working with Dr. Murphy, shared with growers the successes he has had using the manure/dead bird composting system on his 147,000 capacity farm. University of Delaware Associate Poultry Scientist Bud Malone spoke about his DPI sponsored research into acid preservation of dead bird carcasses. If the work is successful, the preserved birds could be used as an animal feed protein source. The final speaker on environmental matters was John Hughes, director of the Delaware Division of Soil and Water Conservation. He told poultry growers voluntary efforts on their part were needed to prevent government regulators from mandating certain types of disposal systems for farm waste products. He said his agency would rather cooperate with them on finding solutions than regulating them.

The economics and future of the poultry industry was the theme of the final segment of the evening meeting. Bill Denson, executive vice president of Agrimetrics Associates of Chester, Virginia, compared growout costs between Delmarva's poultry industry and the industries in the south. He challenged the growers to do their part to control costs so Delmarva can remain competitive with other poultry areas. The seminar's final speaker was Bill Roenigk, director of Economic Research and Membership Services with the National Broiler Council. Mr. Roenigk said the future was bright for the poultry industry because of rising per capita chicken consumption, an increasing American population and improved exports.

Lehr Named Distinguished Penn State Alumnus

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre) — Ray S. Lehr, vice president and general manager of the feed marketing division at Pennfield Corporation in Lancaster, has been named the 1988 Distinguished Alumnus in the animal science area of the Department of Dairy and Animal Science.

Lehr graduated from Penn State in 1960 with a B.S. in animal husbandry. As an undergraduate he was president of the Block and Bridle Club, and a member of both the livestock and meats judging teams. He received the Block and Bridle Outstanding Student Award.

Upon graduation Lehr began a 20-year association with Central Soya Co. at Camp Hill, Pa. Ultimately he was named western region sales manager and general manager of the Farm Supply Division. In this position, he was responsible for all the feed activities west of the Mississippi River and east of the Rockies.

In 1982 Lehr accepted his present position with the Pennfield Corporation where he is responsible for Feed Marketing activities and the 11,000-sow Swine Division.

Lehr has continued his involvement with student programs at Penn State. Currently he is a director of the Penn State Stockmen's Club, which supports programs and student events in animal production. He is also chairman of the Agricultural Committee of the Lancaster County Chamber of Commerce, member of the board of directors of the Pennsylvania Livestock Association and an active member of the Swine Health Advisory Committee of the Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture.

In the past, Lehr has served as chairman of the American Feed Industry Association Marketing Committee, president of the Pennsylvania Livestock Association and president of the Pennsylvania Pork Producers Council.

Lehr and his family live in Millersville. He has recently established a flock of purebred Suffolk sheep in partnership with his brother in Spring Grove.

Farm Input Costs Holding Steady For 1988

NEW YORK — Farm input costs for the upcoming year — previously predicted to increase by two to three percent — will hold steady compared to 1987 input costs, according to industry experts.

"Fortunately, some of the inputs we anticipated to increase have either held steady or increased only slightly," says Richard Brock, president of Brock Associates, a farm marketing/management firm in Milwaukee, Wisconsin.

"Land rental and fertilizers are up a bit, but labor, seed, equipment, chemical and insecticide costs are down," he says.

Brock expects some individual inputs, such as fertilizer and equipment maintenance, to increase slightly. Most other costs will remain about the same or decrease from 1987 levels.

"The greatest increase in crop input prices in 1988 is expected to be in fertilizers, particularly potash," he says. "The primary reason is the result of duties and trade disputes with Canada. This problem, however, has now been resolved and, consequently, no more price increases are expected."

According to Royce Hinton, University of Illinois extension agriculture economist, production costs in 1987 were the lowest they had been since before 1980.

"Farmers have been reducing production costs in recent years," Hinton says. "They're not spending as much on seed, fertilizer, herbicides or insecticides. Much of the cost reduction is due to a lower investment in machinery. Depreciation charges are going down because, rather than replace their machinery, growers are maintaining the equipment they already have."

Lower Prices

Farm chemicals also have come down in price in the last few years, according to Bill Jacobs, product manager for ICI Americas Inc., the fourth largest agricultural chemical company in the U.S.

"The easiest cost savings for farmers come when manufacturers reduce prices on inputs," he says. "Sutan+ herbicide, for example, now costs about 10 percent less than it did several years ago."

Generally, 1988 herbicide and insecticide prices are expected to remain relatively level, Jacobs says.

The failure of the OPEC nations to reach an agreement on reducing output levels has resulted in lower crude oil prices on the spot market, putting costs in the area of $17 per 42-gallon barrel.

"Consequently," Brock says, "the petroleum-based fuels such as gasoline, diesel fuels and kerosene probably will not increase in 1988. In fact, I think we'll see a softening of fuel prices," he says.

Seed costs should remain at 1987 levels with the possible exception of some of the newer hybrids. Some discounts may be available for early orders, early payment or quantity orders, Brock says. These discounts can keep seed costs at or below last year's levels.

Smart Operating

Beyond simple price reductions, however, it pays to look for new ways of operating that can create additional savings. Bulk handling of herbicides is one good example.

"Herbicides cost less per gallon in bulk because it's the most efficient way of storing and moving herbicides," Jacobs says. "Farm suppliers in most of the Corn Belt can now sell you herbicides in 110-, 175- or 250-gallon mini-bulk tanks."

"Once you own a tank," he adds, "you can save even more by having it refilled from a dealer's bulk facility. The price per gallon of herbicide will usually be lower, and in most cases you'll be able to buy the exact amount that you need. You won't have to round out your order with smaller containers."

Weed-n-Feed

Another potential money-saver is combining your herbicide with fertilizer for a two-in-one application.

"Combining field operations is a practice that more and more growers are taking advantage of," says Douglas Duey, University of Nebraska-Lincoln agricultural economist. "Reducing the number of trips over the field saves on time, labor and fuel."

Any field that gets a spring application of herbicide and fertilizer is a potential market for weed 'n feed, he adds.

Weed-n-feed became common many years ago with liquid fertilizer, Jacobs explains, but price reductions last year created a boom in weed-n-feed with dry fertilizer. Herbicides are impregnated onto the dry granules, spread onto the field, then incorporated.

Most dealers now charge only a few cents more per pound of N for urea than anhydrous ammonia, Jacobs says. You can have your N applied free by adding urea to P and K in a dry blend, eliminating a cost of about $5 an acre for applying anhydrous.

Add herbicides to the blend and you cut out another separate application. "By impregnating herbicides on an N-P-K blend, you can get everything applied in one pass over the field for roughly $3 to $6 per acre," Jacobs points out. "Then you just incorporate and plant."

Time Is Money

Weed-n-feed saves time as well as application costs, and this can lead to earlier planting and higher corn yields.

"A long-standing rule of thumb says that for each day planting is delayed after May 10, you lose about a bushel per acre," says Duey.

Earlier planting also allows more time for field drydown in the fall, which saves on bin drying or elevator dockage costs.

"It may be worth trying to set dollar values for time factors like these when you evaluate any practice that can save you time in the spring," Jacobs adds.

too, could be found unconstitutional in her court.

USDA was sued over the marriage regulation by the Family Farm Defense Fund (FFDF) on behalf of Women Involved in Farm Economics (WIFE). The FFDF is the only public interest law firm serving farm families and has provided legal assistance to farm families involved in disputes with Farm Credit System institutions, agencies of USDA and appeals of bankruptcy court decisions. The FFDF takes on cases expecting to set important legal precedents in both state and federal courts. The FFDF also has published a handbook, "A Farmer's Guide to Chapter 12 and Other Farm Bankruptcy Options," to help farmers in financial trouble assess their options. Their Farm Women's Law project specifically develops cases and distributes information to assure farm women equal access to credit and other farm program benefits. Former National Grange Master Edward Andersen is chairman of FFDF's Board of Directors.

Del-Myr Farm tops January DHIA

Del-Myr Farm (Roger and Jeff Myers), Westminster, Maryland, had the herd with the highest average for the month of January, according to figures just released by the Carroll-Baltimore Dairy Herd Improvement Association.

DHIA is a milk testing and record system used by the modern dairymen to help him to manage his business more efficiently. These records are also used in improving sires for artificial breeding and are used in research conducted by the USDA and the University of Maryland.

During the month of January, 108 dairymen in Carroll-Baltimore counties participated in this program. Listed below are the top ten herds based on their herd averages over the past year.

Husband, Wife Team Sheer Sheep

GINGER SECRIST MYERS
Adams County Correspondent

LITTLESTOWN — There are many sounds we associate with springtime around the farmstead. These include the bark of the tractor out back plowing, the roar of the lawn mower making its weekly trip around the yard, and on some farms, the hum of the sheep shears in the shearing shed.

Mark Gutshall, Carlisle, started shearing sheep when he was a junior in high school. Now he sears 250 head annually in evenings and Saturdays with his wife Carolyn's help.

Spring is the time when Pennsylvania's nearly 8,000 head of sheep need to shed their winter coats. And, it's folks like Mark and Carolyn Gutshall, Carlisle, who are getting the job done.

Mark and Carolyn do not have a sheep operation themselves. Mark works full-time at a feed mill and farms 200 acres of rented ground as well. They also have feeder cattle. Carolyn works part-time for a local florist and helps with the farm chores. Their interest in sheep shearing stems from their past FFA and 4-H projects. Shearing now provides them with extra cash and a chance to travel in the Cumberland, Adams, and Perry County areas.

Mark relates that he learned to shear sheep while a junior in high school. He was encouraged by his Vo-Ag instructor Robert Leib to attend a sheep shearing school sponsored by the Carroll County Extension Service in Maryland. Mark grins as he confesses that he only agreed to attend the session because it would take him out of school for two days.

That was seven years ago. Now Mark and Carolyn spend many of their evenings and every Saturday from April 1st to Wool Pool time in mid-June shearing the 250 sheep they do annually. Mark describes his clients as people with a few sheep for grazing a pasture or hand spinners producing their own wool. He has only three large commercial producers for clients.

Carclyn Gutshall carefully prepares the freshly shorn fleece for tying and storage in clean plastic garbage bags. Carolyn and her husband Mark shear sheep on a part-time basis from April 1st till mid-June, Wool Pool time.

When shearing, Mark starts by sitting the sheep up on its rear and removing the belly hair. He then crotches out the sheep. Next he moves up the neck, down the sides, and then finishes the back. Mark tries to make very few second cuts.

He explained that wool spins best when it is clipped as a long strand. Second cuts make very short strands. Mark lists black sheep as the hardest to shear because of the increased number of second cuts he must often make. He lists Suffolk sheep that have been pastured enclosed by a woven wire fence as the easiest and cleanest sheep he often shears.

Mark and Carolyn lists several things a producer can do to insure that shearing day goes smoothly and quickly. First, have the sheep caught in a pen and have someone to help with moving the sheep around. Shut the sheep in under cover the night before shearing so that the sheep are not wet from either rain or dew. Wet wool is hard to clip, dulls clipper blades, and is difficult to store without rotting. Having an extra person bringing up the next sheep to be sheared while Mark shears also speeds up the process.

Carolyn quickly added that close access to electricity is a must since they do not use hand shears. The shearing floor should be clean and dry. The Gutshalls bring their own canvas tarps to lay down on the shearing site and their own paper twine for tying up the fleeces.

Mark notes that he makes very few management comments to producers about their wool quality. "The best quality wool in this country is the imported wool. I don't tell someone not to get hay or excess dirt in the wool. If sheep come in with a lot of briars on their sides we might mention getting the briars cut down, but the producer knows what he's willing to take for his wool. If he wants a better price, then he has to work at keeping his wool cleaner.

When Mark attended shearing school, most of his classmates either owned a few sheep they wanted to shear or were interested in hand shearing. Shearing sheep is hard work. New Zealand doctors, where there is over 100 million sheep to shear annually, have found sheep shearing to be a very strenuous job. They say that shearing sheep for one hour is equivalent to running five miles. Mark averages nine sheep per hour.

Mark has found that while some people will attend a school and attempt shearing one year, fewer and fewer people can handle shearing year in and year out. Stated Mark, "We enjoy shearing. It gives us some extra income and we get out and see more of the country. But, like most shearers, I'll only be in this as long as my back can take it."

Cornstarch Capsules Keep Pesticides Out Of Groundwater

WASHINGTON, D.C. — Pesticide leaching to groundwater can be significantly curbed by encapsulating the chemicals in cornstarch for controlled release, U.S. Department of Agriculture scientists report.

Twelve years of testing show experimental starch-encapsulated pesticides are released "so slowly that leaching is confined to the crop's root zone," said research agronomist Marvin Schreiber.

By contrast, deep leaching to shallow aquifers 4 or 5 feet down may be a problem when pesticides are sprayed, especially before a heavy rain, he said.

Sprayed herbicides, for example, are usually applied at rates that make sure action against weeds lasts over a specified critical time, typically a month. But heavy rains falling just after spraying raise the risk of "preferential flow" driving soluble chemicals to groundwater, Schreiber said.

"Preferential flow is a kind of short-circuiting in which water carrying any dissolved chemicals does not filter through soil as expected. Instead, the water enters a network of connected pores, bypasses large sections of soil, and flows toward groundwater," he said.

Ironically, the effects of this flow are more pronounced in fine-textured clay soils, on which most crops are grown, than porous sandy soils, Schreiber said. He is with USDA's Agricultural Research Service, based at W. Lafayette, Ind.

Regardless of soil texture, he added, deep leaching is not a problem with starch-encapsulated herbicides.

"The application rates are much lower," he said. "And starch encapsulation is approaching the weed fighter's ideal of keeping most of the active chemical where the weed seeds are -- the upper one inch of soil."

Besides controlling leaching, encapsulation reduces environmental hazards caused by drifting and volatilization of pesticides, he said.

"About 15 to 25 percent of sprayed pesticide drifts off target. The volatilization rates of certain pesticides reach 90 percent. Encapsulation reduces such risks to people, animals and nontarget plants," Schreiber said.

Schreiber has been testing the performance of 12 different starch-encapsulated pesticides. They include formulations of atrazine and alachlor, two herbicides that account for 25 percent of all pesticides sold for use in U.S. agriculture.

Chemist William Doane and colleagues at the agency's Northern Regional Research Center, Peoria, Ill., developed the new granular pesticides.

"It's a matter of exploiting the starch granule's internal geometry. When viewed microscopically, starch granules have two kinds of structures, linear and branched. By mixing the ratios of these structures, we can impart any desired property, resistance to microbial degradation, for example," Doane said.

According to Doane, pesticides can also be encapsulated for weed control off the farm, including uses of lawns, parks, golf courses, even aquatic weeds in ponds and watercourses.

Technology has evolved over the years so that there are now five ways of making the starch-based granules by entrapping the pesticide in tiny honey-comb-like openings. The first four ways involved chemically altering the corn starch with xanthate, borate, calcium, and calcium-borate.

Now a new method has been developed using a steam jet cooking process that does not involve chemical alternations, Doane said.

Licensing is available for the starch encapsulation processes, he said.

Present licenses are Illinois Cereal Mills, Inc., in Paris, Ill., and Stauffer Chemical Co., in Westport, Conn.

Although several major pesticides have been encapsulated and tested to the point of readiness for commercial introduction, starch encapsulation has to be researched pesticide by pesticide, Doane said.

"There are thousands of pesticides," he said. "Each one would have to be formulated separately because pesticides differ greatly in physical and chemical characteristics, and in where and how they are to be used. But we've got the knowledge to get the job done."

Student Named Rep To Beef Industry

DOYLESTOWN — Carolyn Lehman of Jersey Shore, PA, has been selected as a regional representative for the beef industry at the Pennsylvania Cattlemen's Conference held recently in State College, PA.

Ms. Lehman is a junior Animal Science major in the large animal field at Delaware Valley College. She is joined by new state representative Lisa Acampora and regional reps Paul Bissman, Cindy Bracken, Carolyn R. Hughes and Dana Ernst, all students at Penn State University.

The program was recently implemented to replace the "queen" program, which has been in operation for the past 10 years. The representatives will be sent out to speak directly to the public and to educate them about the role of beef in their diets.

The students were chosen on the basis of a competition, which included the writing of a brief news article, a verbal presentation and interview. The candidates were required to be between 19 and 23 years old, to have a sound knowledge of the beef industry and animal science, and to be able to deal with the public.

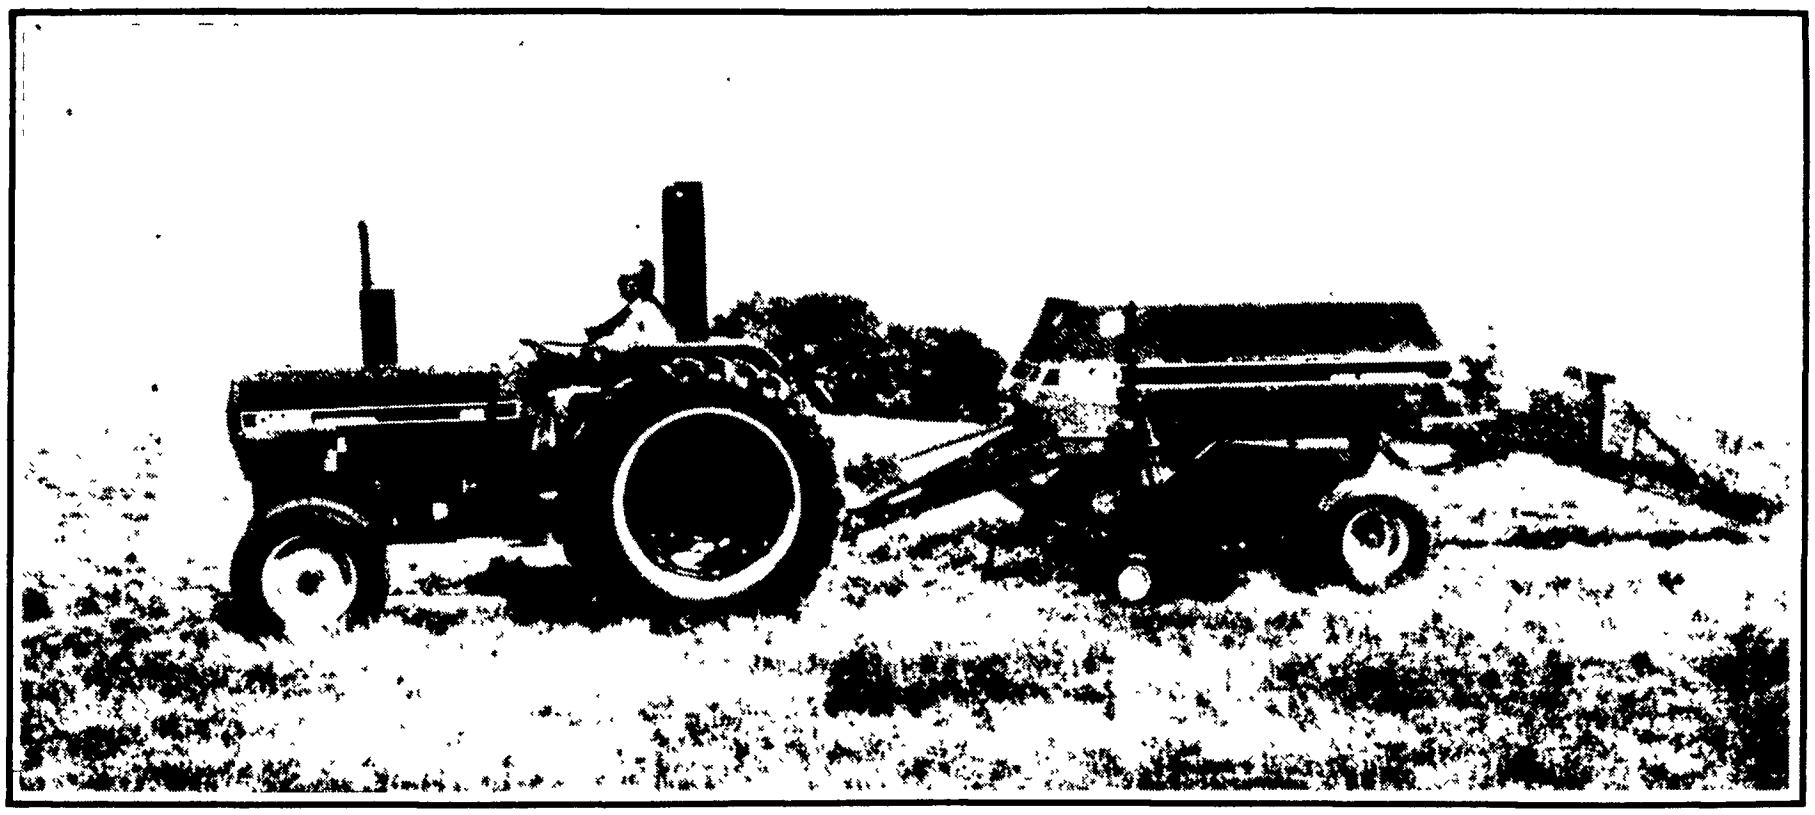
From Standing Field To Finished Bale, CASE IH is on the Job.



Rectangular baling comes six ways at Case IH. For most rectangular-baling applications, choose from the new 8520, 8530, 8540 or 8550 twine balers, or the 8540 in a wire version. All four models feed material straight through from pickup to forming chamber to bale chute, allowing the overall baler width to be far narrower. The result is easier maneuverability and more material in the bale.

The massive new 8580 is the perfect performer for large-scale hay producers. It can build one-ton (900 kg) bales up to 9 ft. (2.7 m) in length, and the handy 8581 accumulator hitches directly to the 8580 and holds up to three bales.

And for the conventional producer, the 5420 rectangular baler offers a dependable, proven design.

Angus Show Has 78 Contestants At Dixie National

JACKSON, MI — A strong set of Angus breeding cattle, totaling 78 head, were led out by their exhibitors at the 1988 Dixie National Livestock Show & Rodeo. Making the final placings at the show was judge Jim Hough, Lakeville, Conn.

Conquest, a September 1986 son of R&J Lurch 303, stepped into the winner's circle in the bull show. Before taking the grand champion banner, he earlier stood as the senior calf winner. He is owned by Douglas Preuss, Terry, Miss., and Mr. and Mrs. Earl Beaver, Tishomingo, Okla.

Shady Brook Angus Farm, Leoma, Tenn., together with Beth McDonald, Huntsville, Ala., exhibited the reserve grand champion bull. Also named the junior calf champion, Visa is a yearling son of Premier Valedictorian.

Another purple ribbon went to the Shady Brook Angus string as they teamed up with Premier Angus Inc., Cloverdale, Ind., and led out the grand champion female. Shady Brook Heidi was also presented the junior champion ribbon. She was born March 1986 and was sired by Harrison.

Windac Coral took reserve grand champion female laurels for her owners Fox Hill Farm, Unionville, Pa., and Double M Farms, Dublin, Va. This April 1986 daughter of Harrison earlier won the reserve junior champion title.

In the group competition, Premier Valedictorian offspring won the get and junior get-of-sire classes. Both sets of champions were shown by Shady Brook Angus Farm and Circle G Angus Farm, Hampton, Ga.

Junior champion bull honors went to Genetics Jack Daniels. This bull is owned by Golden Valley Angus, McKinney, Ken.; Genetics Unlimited Inc., Coatesville, Pa.; and Michael Ruhe, McKinney, Ken.

Canfield St. Louis U755, owned by Canfield Farms, Union, Mi., was declared the intermediate champion bull. Springfield Justice 617 took home the reserve intermediate champion bull ribbon for Springfield Angus Farm, Louisburg, NC.

In the bull calf champion divisions, the reserve senior winner was Worthy Gambler. He is owned by John Gamble, Clinton; Worthington Angus Farm, Clinton; and Star Dust Farm, Sunbright, all of Tennessee. Circle G Angus Farm owns the reserve junior bull calf champion. He is Broadway Joe.

For senior yearling champion female judge Hough chose G F Lin. She was shown by H P W Angus and Paul Hopper, both of Versailles, Ken.

The intermediate champion female was Springfield Juanita 6147. She was shown by Springfield Angus Farm. C G Barbara Gail won the reserve intermediate champion female ribbon for Circle G Angus Farm.

Steven Young, London, Ark., owns the senior heifer calf winner. She is Star Y London Belle. Springfield Angus Farm exhibited another champion, the reserve senior heifer calf winner, Springfield Bonita 6109.

The junior heifer calf champion banner was presented to Shady Brook Vanna. Her owner is Shady Brook Angus Farm. Circle G Jodie A8V claimed reserve junior heifer calf champion laurels for Circle G Angus Farm.

Judge Jim Hough, Lakeville, CT, slapped Windac Coral as the reserve grand champion female of the 78-head Angus show held during the 1988 Dixie National Livestock Show & Rodeo in Jackson, Mississippi. Also named the reserve junior winner, she is owned by Fox Hill Farm, Unionville, PA, and Double M Farms, Dublin, VA.

Something For Everyone!

It's great to have the opportunity to visit with you again about various livestock topics, hoping that you may glean some usefulness from one of the following excerpts . . .

For Cattleman —

Be sure to mark May 10 on your calendar as an important day; when you have the opportunity to participate in the nationwide Beef Referendum that will determine if the $1/head assessment of cattle for beef promotion and research will continue. Referendum voting will take place in your County Extension Office. In Lancaster County, report to the Farm and Home Center, 1383 Arcadia Road, between the hours of 8:30 a.m. and 5:00 p.m. All cattle producers (beef and dairy) who owned cattle during the period of October 1, 1986 through March 31, 1988 are eligible to vote.

Cow/calf operators who are utilizing artificial insemination in their programs are often involved in transferring semen from one tank to another, often at point of purchase or pickup. It is essential that frozen semen be handled carefully and properly to obtain optimum results. When transferring semen between tanks, follow these tips:

- Have the tanks side by side and as close as possible. Fill the tanks with nitrogen before transfer, if possible.
- Have the appropriate canister in each semen tank in the center position.
- Transfer the canes quickly (within three to five seconds). Never touch the units of semen with bare fingers.

For Hog Producers —

When considering updating your swine facilities, remember that some older buildings are good candidates for remodeling, but others aren't worth the expense and effort. Answer the following critical questions before deciding to either remodel or build.

- What's the estimated cost of remodeling compared to new construction?
- How will the convenience, performance, and appearance of the remodeled structure compare to a new one?
- Can your present building be used "as is" or does it require complete remodeling in an expansion program?
- How will you handle manure?
- Is the present location suitable or would another location be better?
- What real contribution will the existing structure make to the goal you expect to achieve?

The key question is, how much can you tie up in building costs? As a general rule, if the cost of remodeling a building is more than two-thirds or three-quarters the cost of a new building, a new unit is most cost effective.

For those considering manure handling options, a new system called the reversing hairpin gutter has been introduced from Canada. The gravity system replaces mechanical scrapers. It consists of a gutter 12 ft. or less in width which is subdivided into two halves. The gutter has a minimum depth of 18 inches, or preferably, 24 inches, and a zero slope. The divide wall should be 16 inches in height minimum. The success of this gutter is due to the flushing action created when the drain plugs are alternately pulled. Many gutters, especially in grower-finisher buildings leave solids when they are drained out. The flushing action of the two plug system reduces this problem. A 2-inch lip on the plug is designed to keep 2-inches in the gutter to prevent solids from sticking to the floor and to allow absorption of ammonia due to urine.

For Shepherds —

Spring shearing has been underway for several weeks now. We recently graduated 25 students from our Lancaster County Extension Sheep Shearing school and some are available to assist you with your shearing needs. Some things to keep in mind to improve your 1988 wool clip are:

- Always shear on a clean, dry floor.
- Keep tags separate.
- Make sure sheep are dry before shearing.
- Avoid second cuts when you shear.
- Always tie fleeces with the flesh side out and use only paper twine.
- Store wool in a clean, dry place.

Wool pool schedules are now being released and the closest for Lancaster County residents will be on June 15, Cumberland County Fairgrounds in Carlisle and June 25 at the Reading Fairgrounds.

One final note for lamb producers concerns an educational meeting regarding "Lamb Grading" to be held on Monday, May 9, 7:30 p.m. at the Lancaster Stockyards. All sheep producers are invited to attend.

For Horse Enthusiasts —

Forages can and should provide the major portion of a horse's ration. Because pastures are often low in quality or unavailable, selecting high quality hay is most important for providing an efficient and economical ration. The higher the quality of hay, the lower the amount of concentrates needed to balance a ration and the greater the number of options available for feeding your horses.

High quality hay has a high nutrient composition, including crude protein and digestible energy and a high intake and acceptability. It is low in cell walls or fiber.

Hay for horses should be (1) at an early or immature stage of growth when harvested, (2) relatively fine stemmed and leafy, (3) free from grass and weeds, toxic substances and excessive foreign material, (4) bright green in color, (5) free from rain damage, dust, mold, and spoilage, (6) high in legume content to provide a higher intake, and (7) a quality forage at least cost. Early cut alfalfa hay meets these criteria!

The Cooperative Extension Service is an affirmative action, equal opportunity educational institution.

Ponderosa Tests Pork On Menu

Pork in a steak house? The Wilmington, Ohio, Ponderosa introduced America's Cut in April as a test production for the national chain. First to be served by franchise owner John Holt were (seated clockwise from front left): Rich Werner and Mike Earley, both representing Moorman Mfg. Co.; and Jeff Murphy and Keith Gibson, officers of the Clinton County Pork Producers.

QUINCY, IL — Wilmington, Ohio, was the site of a breakthrough for pork producers on Monday, April 18, 1988. America's Cut — a lean, boneless pork fillet created to help retailers market pork — was served for the first time in a national chain restaurant. The introduction was the beginning of a year-long test to be performed at the Wilmington Ponderosa. If America's Cut is successful in Wilmington, Ponderosa officials will consider broadening distribution to other locations within the 600+ store chain.

The story of how pork found its way into a steak house is a good example of how grassroots promotion efforts can move big companies into action. All it takes is a little hard work and a lot of perseverance. And Rich Werner, a district sales manager for Moorman Manufacturing Company, deserves a large chunk of the credit for creating this new opportunity for pork.

Last fall, Werner was planning a meeting for his sales representatives at the Wilmington Ponderosa and he asked the owner to serve charbroiled pork. The owner laughed.

"The only thing I could picture was a breaded, fried chop," remembers John Holt, owner of the Wilmington franchise. "I didn't really know what quality, charbroiled pork tasted like." Though Werner settled for another menu choice at that first meeting, he was persistent. The MoorMan sales manager held monthly meetings at the Ponderosa and he kept the pressure on Holt to serve charbroiled pork.

Then Werner had an idea he thought might convince Holt to put "the other white meat" on the menu. Werner brought extra thick-cut pork chops to the restaurant and asked Holt to prepare them, and then join the MoorMan folks for lunch. The restaurant owner was sold with the first bite; but because Ponderosa's menu guidelines are very structured, it wasn't going to be easy to add pork to the menu. Holt decided to apply to become a Ponderosa test market for the pork product.

The franchise owner researched pork preparation and sought out pork suppliers. He learned about America's Cut and decided it would be perfect for his business. According to the National Pork Producers Council, the official America's Cut must come from the center loin portion of the hog and be between 1 and ¼ to 1 and ½ inches thick. No more than ¼ inch of fat cover is allowed. Holt liked the fact that America's Cut was guaranteed to be consistently lean, tender and uniform in size. "It is really a premium cut and serving a quality product is my major concern," says Holt.

The Wilmington Ponderosa owner filled out the test market application and waited to hear from Ponderosa headquarters. But Holt was a newcomer to the Ponderosa organization, so he believed it was a long shot that he'd be selected as a test site. While Holt was doing his paperwork, Werner and his sales representatives were doing their own leg work enlisting the Clinton County Pork Producers. President Keith Gibson arranged to hold the association's annual banquet at the Wilmington Ponderosa. Over 150 pork producers tasted the meal Holt proposed to test — charbroiled America's Cut, salad buffet and potato.

Following the annual banquet, members of the Clinton County Pork Producers ggenerated more than 200 letters to Ponderosa's headquarters in Dayton, Ohio, requeseting America's Cut on the menu. Shortly afterward, Holt was given the O.K. to be the first franchise to test it. The Wilmington Ponderosa menu now includes a 6-ounce America's Cut, which sells for $5.99. MoorMan's, the National Pork Producers Council and the local pork producers continue to support the product through local advertising and promotion.

USAHA Addresses PRV Problem

UNIFORM METHODS AND RULES DRAFT AVAILABLE

A subcommittee of the PRV committee of the United States Animal Health Association has completed work on a proposed UM&R draft for PRV eradication and copies are available for review. The draft will be discussed by the USAHA committee during the annual meeting Oct. 16-21 in Little Rock, AR.

Uniform Methods and Rules are the guidelines for state/federal cooperation. They spell out the criteria for classifying states in the stages of the program, for advancing from one stage to another and for federal standards for movement of swine between states in various stages of the program. The subcommittee also included recommendations on revision of the Code of Federal Regulations with regard to release of herd quarantines, providing for a random sample test for lifting quarantines. The plan provides for a five-stage program: Stage 1, preparation; Stage 2, control, when surveillance is implemented to find infected herds and a voluntary herd cleanup program is carried out; Stage 3, mandatory herd cleanup, when infected herds are required to implement herd plans to eliminate the virus; Stage 4, surveillance, when all known infection has been eliminated and surveillance continues, and Stage 5, free.

After discussion and approval at the USAHA meeting, the draft will go to APHIS-USDA as a recommendation. Copies can be obtained from Dr. Ed Slauter, State Veterinarian, Box 630, Jefferson City, MO 65101, phone 314-751-3377.

HALF OF STATES HAVE TAKEN FIRST STEP TOWARD ERADICATION

Formation of advisory committees, the first step in the eradication plan, has been accomplished in 25 states, according to Dr. Merle Lang, coordinator of PRV activities for National Pork Producers Council. First committee duties are to evaluate the prevalence in their states, to develop eradication plans, to evaluate what actions are needed to revise state laws and regulations, and to conduct information/education programs in their states. A goal of Jan. 1, 1989, for development of state plans was set after an industry meeting early in '86.

Lang pointed out that the states which have begun the program contain about 92% of the sows in the country and have about 75% of the swine herds. Two states, Georgia and New Jersey have reported they are in the process of forming committees. States with advisory committees include Alabama, Arkansas, Colorado, California, Delaware, Hawaii, Iowa, Illinois, Indiana, Kansas, Kentucky, Maryland, Michigan, Minnesota, Missouri, N. Carolina, N. Dakota, Nebraska, Ohio, Oklahoma, Pennsylvania, S. Carolina, S. Dakota, Virginia and Wisconsin.

VACCINE, TEST KIT DEVELOPMENTS

SyntroVet reported at the annual meeting of the Association of Swine Practitioners that it expects approval of its gene-deleted vaccine soon and of the test kit which will permit differentiation between field virus titers and vaccine titers shortly after. The test kit is being developed by AgriTech Systems, Inc.

Upjohn, which has obtained licensing of a gene-deleted vaccine, expects to put that vaccine, Tolvid, on the market on April, and expects approval of a test kit to differentiate vaccine and field strain titers in mid-May. The vaccine is expected to sell for about 70 cents a dose. Upjohn has said that its direct ELISA test will be provided free of charge to state diagnostic labs.

Because of problems with a differentiating test being developed by Norden Laboratories, USDA has been asked to stop trials on the test while the company does more research.

ENGLAND TESTING BOARS AT SLAUGHTER TO COMPLETE ERADICATION

Dr. Tom Alexander of Cambridge in England told the AASP meeting that the English eradication effort has now switched to testing boars at slaughter. In the first stage of the eradication effort, from March to September, 1983, all herds known to be infected were completely depopulated to slaughter in a program which exceeded expected costs by several times. In the second stage, sows and boars were tested at slaughter to find infected herds. Clinical outbreaks are still depopulated, but in herds with only a few seropositive animals a test and slaughter program has been followed. Statistics for the program in a country with about the land mass and the swine population of the state of Illinois, are:

Year	No. herds depopulated	No. herds selective slaughter
1983	443	7
1984	47	32
1985	12	27
1987 (first 9 months)	6	4

A total of 69,000 serum samples were tested in 1986 and over 46,500 in the first 9 months of 1987. Blood testing has been financed by the government, but indemnities paid to producers when herds are depopulated have been financed by a levy on each hog slaughtered. (Immediate depopulation to slaughter of herds to eliminate the virus is not contemplated in the U.S. program except in the final stages of cleanup in difficult herds — Editor).

Heinz Meets Grange Members

Senator Heinz met with Grange Master Charlie Wismer and members of the Pennsylvania State Grange last month when they were in town for their annual Washington, D.C. legislative meeting.

The meeting between Heinz and the Grange, while focusing on many farm issues, centered around Diesel Fuel Tax Exemption and dairy price supports. Hours after meeting with the Grange, the Finance Committee, which Heinz is a member of, adopted the diesel fuel tax exemption proposal in mark-up and reported the bill to the floor.

PRV Problem

GUIDE TO DETERMINING STATUS OF FINISHING HERD

-A first step in deciding what to do about an infected herd is to determine whether virus is still circulating in finishers. If it isn't, it's worthwhile to test sows to determine the status of the sow herd. University of Minnesota research provides some questions for predicting whether virus is circulating in the finishers: (1) Is hemophilus pneumonia present in the herd? (2) Are PRV symptoms present? (3) Are hogs finished in confinement? (4) Is animal protein used in rations? (5) Has the herd been infected for less than 3 years? The more questions that can be answered "no" the more likely it is that the PRV virus is not circulating in the finishers and the better the prospects for herd cleanup. For a more detailed discussion of the research, request 88-3-8 from Livestock Conservation Institute (see address front panel).

ACTIVITIES IN INDIVIDUAL STATES

Minnesota — With required annual testing of sow herds producing feeder pigs in effect in the northern part of the state, of the first 367 herds tested, most in the north where hog population is sparse and the disease is not prevalent, 365 proved negative, one herd had a sow with a low titer and one herd had 2 titers traced to vaccination.

New England — The New England Swine Health Committee has been formed to consider united action against the disease in that area. States involved are Maine, New Hampshire, Vermont, Massachusetts, Rhode Island and Connecticut.

Rotary, Cargill, Brother's Brother Foundation Lend Corn Seed Assistance

Lititz — While rescue didn't come from the cavalry, it came all the same for the drought-affected farmers who came to Carlisle last month. On two separate occasions farmers were given hybrid seed corn donated by Cargill Hybrid Seeds to be planted for livestock feed.

The seed, shipped in from Iowa by Masland Carpets of Carlisle and Hershey Food Corp., was distributed by area Rotary Club members to needy farmers in Cumberland, Perry, Adams, Dauphin, York, Lancaster, Lebanon, and Northumberland counties.

Farmers who suffered a loss of 50 percent or more of their 1987 planting were eligible to receive up to 50 percent of their seed corn needs for this year as part of the relief project.

The project, organized by Cargill, Rotary International and the Brother's Brother Foundation, donated 1,855 bags of Cargill Hybrid 918 to 174 farmers in the eight-county area.

"We decided to gear ourselves toward the smaller, dairy farmer because that is what we have around here," commented Dr. William Spruill, a Carlisle dentist and community service chairman of Roatry District 739 in charge of distribution in this region. "The bigger farms can qualify for other programs."

Cargill has offered 54,000 bags of seed corn for use in the Brother's Brother Foundation 1988 drought-recovery project in Delaware, Maryland, Pennsylvania, Virginia, and West Virginia.

Lasso Michro-Tech Approved For Use In Corn

ST. LOUIS, MO — The U.S. Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) on March 18 approved the use of Lasso Micro-Tech herbicide in corn. The decision by the EPA means that corn growers across the nation now can take advantage of Lasso Micro-Tech for the 1988 growing season.

According to Norm Probst, Monsanto technical manager, Lasso Micro-Tech was first introduced in 1984 for use on soybeans and dry beans.

In Lasso Micro-Tech, the herbicide's active ingredient is encased in microscopic polymer capsules which are suspended in a water base. The herbicide is released from the microcapsules over a period of time for longer, more consistent control of labeled grasses and broadleaf weeds.

"As a result of its advanced formulation technology, Lasso Micro-Tech can offer corn growers excellent performance in dry or wet weather conditions and in both conventional or conservation tillage systems," Probst says.

"In dry weather, for example, the microcapsules help protect the herbicide from evaporation until rainfall can move it through crop residue and into the soil," Probst continues. "The microcapsules also help prevent the herbicide from washing through the soil during heavy rains that can occur soon after application. This means that more herbicide stays in the weed germination zone for longer, more consistent control."

In addition to broad-spectrum weed control, Lasso Micro-Tech offers excellent crop safety with no carryover and less herbicide stress. Approved tank mixes for corn include Lasso Micro-Tech plus atrazine, Banvel or Bladex.

In corn, Lasso Micro-Tech is approved for preemergence surface application, shallow preplant (Surface Blend) incorporation, through center pivot irrigation systems or impregnated in dry bulk fertilizer. Aerial application also is approved.

Kuhn Offers New Retail Finance Program

VERNON, NY — A new retail finance program, featuring three flexible financing options, is now available from Kuhn Farm Machinery, Inc., the Vernon, New York-based manufacturer of haying, tilling and spreading equipment.

Designed to make the purchase of Kuhn equipment more convenient, the Kuhn Finance Program offers buyers a choice of three convenient financing packages tailored to fit individual financial requirements. With Kuhn's retail financing, buyers may purchase new Kuhn equipment through one of three programs: reduced interest; free interest; or normal interest.

The reduced interest program allows a buyer to "choose" his level of interest through a graduated finance program based on loan periods of 12, 24 and 36 months.

A waiver of interest program is also available. Equipment purchased and paid off by May 1, 1988 will be exempt from all interest charges; equipment with a balance remaining after the May date will incur an annual fixed interest rate.

The final option available to Kuhn customers is the normal interest program, which consists of a fixed annual interest rate with a maximum financing period of 36 months.

The Kuhn Finance Program is subject to change. Please see your Kuhn dealer for complete details. For further information contact Kuhn Farm Machinery, Inc., P.O. Box 224, Vernon, New York.

Alfalfa Award Goes To Berks Co. Farmer

OLEY (Berks) — A Berks County farmer produced the second highest alfalfa yield in Pennsylvania during the 1987 growing year.

Ken Zook produced 9.02 tons of alfalfa an acre to win the reserve champion plaque in the Pennsylvania Five-Acre Forage Contest. He used Pioneer® brand 5432.

The annual contest is sponsored by the state Alfalfa Growers Association and the Pennsylvania State University.

Zook says two key management practices helps maintain his high productivity: cutting on time and proper fertility levels.

He received his award this spring at the Berks County Crops Day in Leesport from County Extension Agent Herb Wetzel.

Berks County Extension Agent Herb Wetzel presents Ken Zook of Oley with the reserve champion award he earned in the state forage producers contest. Norman Kurtz (right), local Pioneer sales representative, also acknowledges Zook's achievement.

Case IH Offers 5-Year Warranty On Magnum Tractors

RACINE, WI — Case IH is setting an industry standard by introducing a 5-year/5,000-hour warranty on all new MAGNUM tractors.

"A standard tractor warranty of this duration is a first for the agricultural equipment industry," according to Glen Miller, Case IH director of customer services. "It reflects the confidence Case IH has in the thoroughly tested reliability of the MAGNUM line."

Recent Case IH market research continues to emphasize just how much today's farmers value broader and longer warranty coverage when contemplating a new tractor purchase, Miller said.

"To succeed in today's agricultural economy, a company must be truly customer focused. First Case IH introduced the most advanced tractor line — it includes many features customers were asking for. Now Case IH has introduced the strongest warranty — another feature customers were asking for," Miller said.

"In part, the new plan is a continuation of innovative Case IH extended warranty programs. Experience with the extended warranties on previous tractor lines makes Case IH confident that the customer only will gain with the 5-year/5,000-hour warranty on MAGNUM tractors," Miller said.

"An equally important reason for offering the 5-year/5,000-hour warranty is the MAGNUM tractors' exceptional reliability, resulting from their advanced design and manufacturing. The new warranty documents the company's confidence in the MAGNUM line's reliability," Miller added.

"Thousands of hours of laboratory and field testing confirm the reliability of the MAGNUM line," Miller said.

The warranty coverage applies to all of the 14,000-plus parts on the MAGNUM tractors. Only the tires, which are covered by tire manufacturers' warranties, are excluded.

The 5-year/5,000-hour coverage provides no-charge, warranty service for dealer labor and parts replacement during the first year.

During the second year through the fifth year, the plan pays warranty service charges after a $200 deductible is paid by the customer. If a customer sells a tractor, the warranty is transferable.

The warranty applies to all MAGNUM tractors including those already sold and being used by farmers.

This coverage applies to Model 7110 at 130 PTO horsepower, Model 7120 at 150 PTO horsepower, Model 7130 at 170 PTO horsepower and Model 7140 at 195 PTO horsepower. All four models are row-crop two-wheel-drive tractors with optional mechanical-front-drive.

"Case IH believes the market will react extremely favorably to this warranty," Miller said. "The MAGNUM line has generated a great deal of interest in the North American market, and this warranty should just be the icing on the cake."

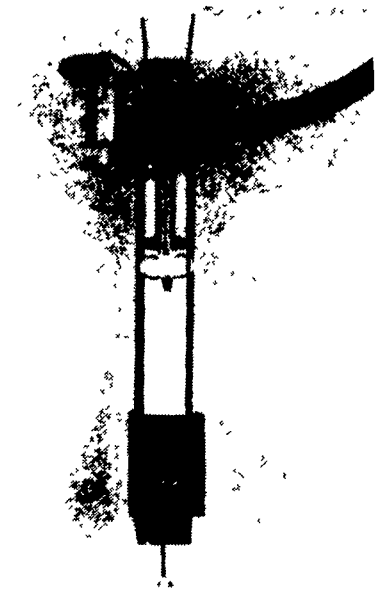
Case IH has announced the industry's longest standard warranty program on its MAGNUM line of 130- to 195-PTO-horsepower tractors. The 5-year or 5,000-hour warranty covers all parts except tires, according to Case IH officials.

Alfa-Laval Introduces Portable Take-Off Unit

KANSAS CITY, MO — Alfa-Laval Agri, Inc., a worldwide dairy supplier based in Kansas City, has introduced a portable version of its SST™ II Take-Off unit for use in tie stall or stanchion barn dairy operations.

The Portable SST™ II Take-Off uses an advanced microprocessor to fully automate milking claw removal. The new take-off enables one operator to control more milker units simultaneously, thus eliminating extra steps in the milking process. The Portable SST™ II improves milking accuracy and allows more cows to be milked per hour.

The unit's microprocessor control provides the operator with a number of programmable functions, including retraction delays that can be set for 9, 16, 23 or 30 seconds. A "milk sweep" function can be selected to reduce the amount of milk left in the claw and milk tube.



This take-off unit enables one operator to control more milker units simultaneously.

The control module of the Portable SST™ II has been conveniently located to simplify the operator's movements. The unit's light weight — only 8.3 lbs. with pulsator — and ergonomically designed handle maximize operator comfort. And to improve work efficiency, an inidicator light alerts the operator of retraction.

When the unit is disconnected from the vacuum line, it is kept in the retracted position by a patented cord lock. This feature eliminates the need for hanging the milking claw on the take-off unit before moving to the next cow.

The Portable SST™ II Take-Off unit is designed for use with Delatron™ AL pulsators. The unit can be purchased directly from any De Laval Dealer.

For more information, contact: Scott Sanford, National Product Manager, Milking, Alfa-Laval Agri, Inc. (816) 891-7700.

USDA Proposes Watermelon Research Program And Promotion

WASHINGTON, D.C. — The U.S. Department of Agriculture recently proposed a national research and promotion program for watermelons.

Originally advanced by the National Watermelon Association in accordance with the 1985 Watermelon Research and Promotion Act, the program would provide research, advertising, and sales promotion to improve the position of watermelons in the marketplace, said J. Patrick Boyle, administrator of USDA's Agricultural Marketing Service. It would operate at no cost to the federal government, financed by a 2 cents per hundredweight assessment on watermelons paid by handlers and by farmers who grow five or more acres of watermelons.

Anyone who both grows and handles watermelons would pay assessments for each function. Otherwise, no handler or producer would have to pay more than one assessment on any watermelon. Producers and handlers assessed under the program could request and receive refunds.

A 29-member board appointed by the secretary of agriculture would administer the program. Twenty-eight members would come from nominations by watermelon producers and handlers, the other member, to be appointed from outside the industry, would represent the public. As in similar research and promotion programs in agriculture, the board would develop plans with approval by the secretary and would oversee an administrative staff managing the program's daily work.

The proposal is based on the evidence presented at public hearings held Feb. 18-19, 1987, in Las Vegas, Nev., and Feb. 24-25, 1987, in Atlanta, Ga. It will appear as a "recommended decision" in the Federal Register.

Comments on the recommended proposal should be sent in quadruplicate to the Hearing Clerk, Rm. 1079-S, USDA, 14th and Independence, Washington, D.C. 20250, by May 23. Upon reviewing them, the secretary will decide on whether to hold a referendum among all eligible watermelon producers and handlers to measure support for the plan. The plan would become effective only if approved by at least two-thirds of the producers and handlers voting, or by a majority of producers and handlers accounting for at least two-thirds of the volume of watermelons grown by all voters.

Copies of the proposal and additional information may be obtained from Tom Tichenor, Marketing Order Administration Branch, Fruit and Vegetable Division, AMS, USDA, Rm. 2523-S, P.O. Box 96456, Washington, D.C. 20090-6456; telephone (202) 475-3930.
